BODENSTEIN TO RETIRE

It is probably common knowledge around the campus by now that this is Mrs. Bodenstein's last term of teaching at Highacres. At the end of this term Mrs. Bodenstein is retiring from 18 years of loyal service with the Penn State University. Mrs. Bodenstein joined the faculty of Highacres in 1956, and has since then become a familiar figure on campus. She teaches German, English, and etiquette. Mrs. Bodenstein is also the advisor of the Theta Sigma Pi Sorority.

When asked about her future plans, Mrs. Bodenstein replied that she was not definite on anything, but she would like to move out of Hazleton due to the severe winters. She does not know where she would like to relocate, but she is looking for three features in the place of residence. She does not want to live too far away from her daughter and grandchildren in Washington D.C., demands an intellectual environment, and prefers a mild climate. All of these things considered, the one place that stands out in her mind as her possible future home is State College. There she can find worthwhile things to do with her time, while not being too far away from her "young people."

Mrs. Bodenstein states that Penn State University has treated her very well and that she has greatly enjoyed working for it. "I'm proud to belong to a university like Penn State," she said.

Mrs. Bodenstein is definitely looking forward to having time to herself, without having to worry about grading papers or correcting tests. "I want to contemplate the universe," she said. "To look at things for their beauty... enjoy nature... enjoy people."

Mrs. Bodenstein also wants a chance to work with her hands, perhaps working with various kinds of crafts and creating something with "butility," a delightful coined word of hers, meaning beauty and utility. She also hopes to have the time to increase her proficiency with the violin and piano in the years to come.

Her immediate plans include six months of pure relaxation. After these glorious months of rest, she wants to do some traveling. She has decided to "See America first. I love America and I really want to look at her," she said. Mrs.
