

FAREWELL

by Janilou Maderick

Farewell to arms, legs, eyes, noses, minds, bodies, and other assorted paraphernalia associated with my dear friends at Highacres. Yes, that long-awaited term has finally arrived. As of spring term 1974, Janilou is off to see the wizard at the Mecca of all PSU Commonwealth Campus students--University Park. Bigger and better things certainly await me there.

Nevertheless, even in the heights of snobbery I could never forget the life and times I enjoyed at Misty Mountain. I will always feel a warm place in my heart and a soft spot in my head when I remember such stirring occasions as those days of uninhibited fun on the foundation of our campus landmark, the Markle Mansion. Picnics held there were nearly always concluded by a highly imaginative "tour" of that great edifice, no longer with us. Who could forget being ecstatic about Stat 200 (and learning the entire Greek alphabet) along with Mr. Paul and a chosen few? When reminiscing about past terms, the one and only X-rated movie in Mr. McKinstry's Psy 2 class will come to mind. Starring several prominent researchers and a cast of thousands (rats, or course), it was a true expedition in pornography! Whenever I find myself in a pseudo-economic bind, I will, no doubt, recall the day inflation hit the SUB, and the price of milkshakes was raised 5¢. My fondest memories of the scholastic side of life at Highacres will certainly include having Dr. Aurand and his hats for three terms in a row.

What I will miss the most while at University Park is that fun-loving bunch of idiots known as my friends. One would never guess that a person could become attached to a blah place like Hazleton. Well, I have and I would venture to guess that quite a few of those who read this article have also. Examine your memories and see. Most likely you will agree that Hazleton isn't such a bad place to live after all, and any loyal PSU student here can testify to that.

assistants

In the beginning of the Winter Term, letters were sent to all the residents of the dormitory saying that applications for the positions of Resident Assistants were being accepted. Several days later, 22 students met in the Boys' Project Room with the purpose of selecting six R.A.'s. Agendas were passed out and small group sessions were held. Meetings would be once a week unless otherwise notified.

The process consisted of two small group sessions, group interviews, and personal interviews. After this, Mr. Binns, Mrs. Lewis, and the six current R.A.'s met for a first cut. The cut eliminated those who had not scored high enough in the previous sessions. Then the five remaining girls and the five remaining boys had a taping session in which the individual was confronted with a problem that he had to solve on tape. The taping was unrehearsed, and each individual was given a different problem. The candidates then had to have a personal interview with Mrs. Lewis, and Mr. Binns, and the last cut was made.

The Resident Assistants for the 1974-75 school year are Debbie Burgess, 18, Patti Blust, 18, Linda Holden, 18, Mark Butler, 19, Bill Finerfrock, 18, and Bill Hall, 19.

WHO'S WHO

Who's Who in American Junior Colleges has selected twenty-five students from the Hazleton Campus of the Pennsylvania State University. They are Deborah A. Berger, John F. Busher, Jeffrey E. Devers, Linda M. Gallagher, Gary L. Gray, Joyce E. Grego, Kenneth E. Heydt, Joan M. Hudak, Barry L. Jais, Robert J. Keifer, Joseph C. Lendvay, Rolland B. Loomis, Joseph F. Morris, Jr., Roberta M. Nothstein, Michael T. Petresky, Mary F. Postupack, Maria J. Rovito, Anthony V. Seo, Carol J. Shenosky, Deborah E. Snyder, David S. Trumbauer, Dale E. Walck, John D. Yatsko, David F. Wolf and Joseph S. Zuba II.

The basic concept for Who's Who is to provide a democratic national basis for recognition of campus leaders. The nominees were selected by faculty and administration of the Hazleton Campus according to the student's participation in activities and his academic achievement. The nominations were then submitted to the national office for approval. The Who's Who Directory is used by prospective employers, including the government, as an important indicator of future success. The Organization may also be used as a reference on job applications.
