creamer known as "Preem." However, the process was not feasible on a large-scale basis, and, unfortunately, was never carried into mass production.

Last year, when Mr. Harner heard that Kramer's Jewelers was for sale, he decided to purchase the business and settle in Hazleton. He had worked for a jewelry store in Berwick during high school, and dropped in from time to time during his years at University Park, so he knew the jewelry business well. Mr. Harner likes the area, "I feel like I'm a Hazletonian now. I plan to spend the rest of my life here."

Mr. Harner attended the Highacres Campus in the Spring Term of 1964. Mr. Harner is well aware of the competition of a college, especially with his experience with University Park. For this reason he feels that Highacres is in some ways an easier campus to identify with, by virtue of sheer numbers. He feels that there is "more personal contact here at Highacres," which he feels is a great asset to the campus and to the students.

Mr. Harner would like to see Highacres someday built into a four-year campus. However, he cannot see this happening in the near future, although he feels that the new Physical Education Building is an important step in the right direction. He does, however, foresee difficulties with both numbers and facilities.

He would "like to see more cooperation between the community and Highacres." Mr. Harner feels that this is a problem that must be remedied by the students themselves in the form of some activities involving the whole community. Mr. Harner is Vice President of the Hazleton Penn State Alumni Club, which he feels can also benefit the community and its relations with Highacres.

While speaking about the community's attitudes toward the campus and the students, Mr. Harner commented that Hazleton was an old-fashioned town, and, "until all the people realize that 'kids' are individuals and everyone has to be judged as an individual... until the kids prove it themselves...if the kids could start some kind of activity... communication is lacking."

Mr. Harner feels that it is not subject material that makes a course, but the professors. A good professor, stated Mr. Harner, can put himself into a course and the students can get more out of it. A professor who cares only about "weeding out" the best students has no right to be teaching, in Mr. Harner's opinion.

In the past years Mr. Harner has seen colleges growing more and more liberal. He cites co-educational dorms as one of the outstanding points of this liberalization. He mentioned halls at University Park for graduate students which have men and women's rooms right next door to each other and operates totally on an honor system. Mr. Harner also mentioned the new appropriations for women's sports at Penn State, which he feels would not have been possible even two years ago.

While on the subject of appropriations Mr. Harner stated the following: "I'm not plugging Milton Shapp...but I am really proud of my state this year, because the legislature finally got off its duffs and passed appropriation bills." He mentioned that the University had been operating under a debt for the past few years.

Mr. Harner feels that Penn State University as a whole has a great deal to offer the people of Pennsylvania. "The services Penn State could offer and is willing to offer to the general public is entirely without match." He feels that the people should take advantage of the wealth of knowledge that Penn State has to offer it.

"I really love Penn State," Mr. Harner stated in the course of the interview. "There's no place like Penn State."
