duce yourself and welcome a fine new prof to the Pennsylvania State University, Hazleton Campus!

On her colleagues: The new English instructor finds the Highacres faculty to be generally communicative, dedicated to students, and not preoccupied with personal ambitions.

"Teachers here haven't over-specialized in their fields," she asserted. She was also pleased that there seemed to be so much faculty-student cooperation in campus and community activities.

Mrs. Dill, who has lived in Hawaii, Idaho, and on the West Coast, now resides in the scenic Sugarloaf farm country. She is the mother of a daughter, 16, who attends high school in the Hazleton area, and a son and a daughter who live in California and Idaho respectively.

PARNASSUS BOOK SALE HELD

The Parnassus Chapter (Highacres) of the Keystone Honor Society conducted a sale of used books for the Hazleton Campus Library on Thursday and Friday, Oct. 10 and 11. Students were able to purchase fiction, nonfiction and text books on the main floor of the S.U.B. The proceeds from this sale will go to benefit the Hazleton Campus Library so that it may continue to serve the students of this campus to its fullest capacity.

ORIENTATION

get in groups to talk with a professor, and when students could sign up for activities, I believe, were the high points of Orientation... The only part I liked about Orientation is when we went to our separate colleges and get to meet our advisors...Orientation was O.K., but they should have a different variety of things to do instead of listening to all these speeches. It was good in the respect that we didn't have to go to classes right away without knowing what to do or where to go...Orientation wasn't too bad, but I wish they could have skipped a lot of stuff--like that library talk...Orientation was a waste of time. Most of the talks were boring and, although the idea was for us to get to know people, everyone stayed in his own group...the survival session was not appropriate...Pre-Registration was good. It told us what to expect...The first talks were boring...I didn't like being told I 'had' to pay four dollars without being notified in advance about it...Registration went fast..."

Perhaps these opinions can be of some aid to future Orientation Planning Committees. Who should know better what was good and bad about Orientation than those who experienced it?

Highacres has in general made an excellent impression on the incoming students. Some of the feelings of the new students are as follows:

"Highacres is a quiet and friendly place...Highacres is a peaceful place with beautiful surroundings. The people, as a whole, are very friendly, and the administration seems concerned about student affairs...Highacres is very nice...Highacres is a beautiful place with 'beautiful' people...Highacres is really nice but it should be level!!!!"

Hear, hear!

MRS. MOYER

a challenge and an exciting new experience. She cites the friendliness and helpfulness of her colleagues. "The faculty and administration have been so friendly and helpful that I have thoroughly enjoyed my first weeks at the campus. I have also enjoyed renewing acquaintances with many former students from Hazleton High School and am looking forward to learning more about the varied backgrounds of other students."

Mrs. Moyer has, in the few weeks that she has been here, noticed a contrast between college and high school students. She feels that there is a difference in the attitudes of the students toward school and their work, noting that she feels the college students want to learn and are in college by choice, which in turn causes them to be "more conscientious and eager to learn." She feels that it is "more vital to a college freshman to learn all he can" than to a large number of high school students.

Mrs. Moyer's activities outside of teaching include such varied interests as reading, crocheting, and canning. Her favorite poet is William Carlos Williams and her favorite author is (wouldn't you know it?) Shakespeare. She also likes modern works and has recently finished reading The Word by Irving Wallace. Incidentally, Mrs. Moyer hated The Exorcist.

Welcome to Highacres, Mrs. Moyer, and we heartily hope that it lives up to your expectations. We're sure it will. And we are equally sure that Mrs. Moyer will live up to our expectations and become a great asset to our campus.

Let me today do something that will take a little sadness from this world.
