Highacres Chapter

"The Hazleton Campus of The Pennsylvania State University presents a Seminar on Cybergenetics and Cunglonimism," announces a squat bug-eyed man in a trench coat to a room full of curious Penn Staters. Moments later three professional-looking scoundrels enter the room and march up to the podium. One "professor" is wearing a tuxedo with short pants and sneakers, the second one is wearing swimming trunks and is carrying a gym bag, and the third is wearing a cap and gown and is carrying an open umbrella.

"Anyone lived in a pretty how town with up so floating many bells down...", they begin to recite an E. E. CUUummings poem in harmony. After the poem is completed, two of the professors take seats while the other begins a lecture proving that one equals seven. In the middle of the lecture the ringing of a telephone is heard emanating from the second professor's gym bag. He takes a telephone out of the bag and begins a discourse about the price of snowshoes in Alaska with an anonymous caller. The lecture continues but before it is completed, the lecturer runs to the middle of the room pursuing an invisible taxi proclaiming, "Taxi!! Taxi!! You can't get a taxi around here anymore!!"

After the lecture is completed, the professors vacate the room, leaving a crowd of disbelieving, shocked people, who are even more curious now than they were when they had entered the room.

Is the world coming to an end? Have three deadly, diabolical creatures escaped from the planet Tralfamodore? The answer to both questions is "no." These three lunatical beings present

What About Classical Music?

By MICHAEL CHARNIGO
COLLEGIAN Staff Writer

First there was Dr. Pepper, the worlds' most misunderstood "soft drink?" Well, welcome to the worlds' most misunderstood music, "Classical." Numerous myths exist about this music, and now is the time to dispel some of them.

Perhaps the greatest myth about Classical music is that it is dead. Nothing is farther from the truth. Although the patient was critical for a time, he is now on the road to recovery. There has been a new rush of interest, on the part of the present generation, towards this music. The ratings of Classical radio stations are on the rise, and even non-Classical stations are fitting it into their programming, according to "Stereo Review." Why this new interest?

The new interest could be due largely because many people now are discovering that Classical music is not only for the old "stuffed shirts" in the concert halls. A good example is Beethoven. Such songs as "Roll over Beethoven" and "A Fifth of Beethoven," while perhaps satirizing Classical music, have also initiated a new interest in Classical music. A large portion of the public is discovering that this music can be just as vibrant and exciting as our popular music

The rear entrance of the cafeteria was utilized as a temporary car port on the morning of February 21. An automobile owned by Steve West, a Resident student had been moved to this location supposedly by other Penn State students. Upon driving the vehicle from the area, West was greeted by a Police Service member who presented a fine of $10 for driving in a restricted zone. Photo by Dave Kraft.
