Beer Can Collecting: More Than a Hobby

By ELLIOT GROSSMAN
Collegian Contributing Editor

In this age of conveniences, of push-button mechanisms, and zip top beer cans, there exists a group of determined, dedicated individuals who aren't willing to take the easy route to opening beer cans. They refuse to open cans using the tab on top. They go out of their way by using can openers to open their cans from the bottom to preserve and eternalize their precious beer cans.

These people, of course, are beer can collectors and are participants in a hobby that has seen its ranks grow over the past several years to 15,000 collectors nationally.

Highacres has several beer can collecting enthusiasts. Among these enthusiasts is one student, John Page, and one former Highacres student, Brad McNab.

John Page explained how he got started collecting beer cans. "The day my car broke down on the interstate and I had nothing to do; so I started to collect cans."

That day was only two months ago and Page now has 250 different cans.

Brad McNab not only collects beer cans, but

Please make use of our services. There is so much we can do if things are brought to our attention. Student Senators receive only a small amount of information from students. If something is bothering you, please come to us and ask for our help. Chances are we can get more done than you might by yourself. The S.G.A. office is located directly to the right as you enter the Commons.

To everyone--Have a great summer; To the graduates--Best of luck; To the transferring student--Good luck in your new homes; and to the returning students--I will see everyone next fall.
