The Hazleton Campus welcomes three new faculty members this year. They are Dr. Margaret Cote, Dr. Joseph Marchesani, and Mr. Archie Warnock.

Dr. Cote is from Aliquippa, Pennsylvania, which is near Pittsburgh. She attended Carlow College in Pittsburgh, where in 1969, she received her B.A. degree. In 1973, she received her Ph.D from the Catholic University of America in Washington, D.C. Before coming to Hazleton, Dr. Cote taught at Eastern Connecticut State College in Willimantic, Connecticut, Mohegan Community College in Norwich, Connecticut, and the University of Maryland. Dr. Cote is teaching English 4 and English 10 and will also be teaching English 20 and literature courses.

Among her comments about the Hazleton Campus, Dr. Cote stated that she is impressed with the beautiful setting of the campus, the diligence and response of the students, and the help she and her family have received from fellow teachers and staff.

She has been warned, though, of the brutal winters in Hazleton, but she feels that she has made a wise decision in coming here anyway.

Dr. Marchesani is from Philadelphia and he received his B.A. in psychology from the University of Pennsylvania, his M.A. and Ph.D in English from the University of Rochester. He taught at Marietta College in Ohio before he came here. Dr. Marchesani is also teaching English 4 and English 10 at the Hazleton Campus.

He is impressed by the strong motivation of the students at the Hazleton Campus and he sees as part of his task "an effort to tap that motivation while exposing my students to a range of ideas and attitudes whose strength does not lie in their economic or vocational advantages."

Mr. Warnock is from Arlington, Virginia and he is a graduate of Penn State. He recently received his M.A. and he held a graduate assistant position at University Park for three years. He is teaching math 10, 61, and 100 while at Hazleton.

Mr. Warnock finds the campus to be "simply beautiful and the students seem eager to start class and eager to get out (both probably a result of summer vacation)."

Since his office is on the second floor of the main building, he describes the area around there as that of a "sardine can." He also says that "shortage of space is evident everywhere and my helpful colleagues lighten the load considerably."

A Hazleton First

By Lesa Bagley

For the first time ever the board of Trustees of the Penn State University met at our campus. There were over 100 in attendance at the two day meeting, which included tours of the campus. This was only the second time the Board has not met at University park. The Board met last year at the Behrend campus in Erie and has plans to meet at the New Kensington campus next year.

The 78-79 fiscal budget of $111,961,000 for Penn State was approved at this meeting. Things which were discussed that affect our campus included the new entrance way, the Arts and Crafts Center and the refurbishing of the basement of the Commons.

The new entrance way will be a limestone serpentine wall with the University seal and Nittany lion incorporated into each wall. Landscaping and lighting will also be done. No University funds are involved in this project all costs will be paid through local funding.

Hazleton will also receive part of the $35,900 Enrichment of Campus Life and Cultural Offerings Fund of which $1,600 will go to establishing the Arts and Crafts Center and $3,500 to go to the refurbishing of the commons basement.

For those of the advisory board attending, the campus held a chicken-Clam Bake dinner. Along with three neighboring Commonwealth Campuses (Schuylkill, Worthington, Scranton-Wilkes-Barre) Highacres received many favorable comments for its lovely campus.

Study the past for understanding;
live the present for growth; plan the future for contentment.

Mrs. Enama Devoted To Hazleton

By Paula Koestner

Upon returning to the Hazleton Campus this term, many of us were disheartened on hearing of the unexpected death of Mrs. Vivian Enama. Mrs. Enama was the personal secretary of Dr. David, but her devotion to the Campus and its students went far beyond her normal duties. Penn State was really her life. Being one of the longest employed by this Campus, Mrs. Enama worked for the University for almost 25 years, beginning when the Hazleton Campus was located at the Broad St. and Walnut St. buildings. When the Campus was moved to Highacres, she was a great help to Dr. David himself, aiding him in his new job as Director of the Hazleton Campus.

Besides being an asset to the University, she was also an asset to its students. Mrs. Enama was very active in the Hazleton Campus Woman's Auxiliary, where she helped raise money for the students loan fund. She was everyone's friend, always putting time aside to help someone with a problem. When the campus was smaller, Mrs. Enama knew every student, and took such an interest in them that she collected newspaper articles of the achievements of former students.

Mrs. Enama loved to travel, her untimely death occurred while she was vacationing in Virginia, where she suffered a stroke. Her death, besides being a great personal loss to Dr. David, was also a great loss to the University and its students. She will be dearly missed.
