"Lysistrata," a Greek comedy by Aristophanes, was presented by the Highacres Drama club from October 25 through the 28. Mr. Jay Breckinridge, Director, came up with his own version of the play from six different translations.

Members of the cast were: Kathleen Zellner as Lysistrata; Janie Polohovich as Kleonike; Lisa Morano as Anagyra and Woman #3; Stephanie Franz as Myrrhinl; Faith Petrovich as Lampito; Gladys Torres as Ismene; Mary Gawrych as Police Woman, Woman #1 and the servant; Mark Peterson as Commissioner; Keith Knearan as Policeman #1; Gerry Nork as Policeman #2; Scott Ferreria as Policeman #3; Russ Day as Kinesias; Bob Stock as Sparton Herald; Todd Buskirk as Spartan Ambassador; Jay Breckinridge as Koryphaias of men; Bob Faulhaber as Drakes; Dominic Morollo as Philourgos;

Joyce Minar as Koryphaias of Women; Michele Baymore as Diagora; and Carol Eames as Prakagora.

"Lysistrata" begins with the women of Greece discussing their feelings about the war. Naturally they hate it, since the war keeps their husbands away for such long periods of time. Lysistrata, the main character of the play, develops a plan. She persuades all the women to band together and take the affairs of state into their own hands. An ultimatum is issued to the men: no sex until a truce is declared. All of the women leave their homes and go to stay in the Aeropolis.

The Men, after realizing the seriousness of the situation bring the ambassadors together and peace is decided. Sex is finally restored.

Financing of their production came from the Cultural Activities Fund.
