

Tony Leshinskie, aside from being ace photographer for the Highacres Collegian, has made his mark as an active, key person in the RHC operation.

Tony served as chairman of the fund-raising committee, and, in that role, organized a number of successful money raising projects and events, including at least one car wash. In addition Tony was a participant in virtually every one of RHC's functions.

Tony's precise and responsible nature has made him an invaluable asset to the Collegian in that he has always come through with the last minute photography that this paper depends on. Most admirably, he has consistently come through without a single complaint.

If it is possible for one individual to be engrossed in extra-curricular activity, yet dedicated to studies; involved in exhaustive work, yet remain untiring; at the top of sometimes seemingly uncontrollable responsibility, yet remain in control; that individual is personified in Chris McNab.

Chris has made involvement in Hazleton Campus life a part of her own life. In addition to being Vice-President of the Student Government Association, she has held the Presidency of HCAC during the year.

She has also been involved with the Hazleton Campus Video by co-hosting "People, Places, and Things," a feature magazine. Through all she has done this year, Chris has been an inspiration to her peers.

One of the most active, responsible, and cooperative students in the campus this year has been Alita Rovito. Her warm personality and ambitious attitude have won her not only the Eric Walker Award, but also the student of the year award. It is not hard to see why Alita's peers elected her student of the year.

Throughout the year, Alita has spent long, hard hours operating a tight, responsible student government. As President, her responsibilities required her to deal closely with students, faculty and administration. Her caring and tactful nature made this work easy for her.

In addition to her involvement in the SGA, Alita has been a correspondent for HCV, and a reporter for the Highacres Collegian. She was also active in HCAC, where she served as Vice-President and also in Parnassus Society.

Talent is one thing, and experience is another. Joe Krushinsky has been one of the few students on campus that has been able to combine the two and lead a small video operation from five taping sessions a year to weekly broadcasts. Talent wise, Joe has handled the responsibility of designing creative formats for both the Hazleton Campus Video, of which he is Executive Producer, and the Highacres Collegian. Experience wise, he has consistently fulfilled obligations with the tact and know-how that are vital in the field of Journalism.

Joe has also combined his experience and talent and has used the two to give the Collegian a new look. He has gone beyond the duties asked of a Layout Editor.

Hazleton Campus

Video is another example of Joe's work. During his two years here, he has devoted more time to his organization than any other leader on the campus. His future plans involve either work on a daily newspaper, or production in a television station. Joe cannot lose with the experience and talent he has so finely developed throughout his life.

Jayne Ann Bugda is, not the president of any club on campus. Her name is not constantly in print for all of her contributions to the campus. Yet few individuals on this campus can rank with Jayne in terms of ambition and real success in pursuing interest in clubs and her future career.

Jayne is currently employed with the campus business office, WZTA radio, and she writes "Highacres Happenings" for the Hazleton Standard Speaker. Her club activities include work as co-anchor of NewsView 13 on HCV-TV every week. Jayne also holds the post of Business Manager with the Highacres Collegian.

Her career goals include becoming either a television newscaster or a radio program director.
