"THE
MAGIC
SEASON"

BY JUSTINA DELUCCIO

Been waiting to find a season where life would fall into place where dreams could be dreams and where curtains could be drawn to capture the warmth of the moment and save the memories of the day for a tomorrow

But in this world we keep running round and round bound by reason and surrounded by clouds that blind us from the season that can erase some of the confusion of the moment

Yes, the preparation and the pressures of the time don't mix, But in the end the pressures fade away in the comfort of family and friends if we let the magic of the season take hold

Well, the storms are many and the world is a blur, but in the distance there are some traces of red and green that can be seen amidst the confusion and the spirit is no illusion, It's almost at our door with the season we've all been searching for
