

have it, though, the photographer declined his original acceptance to do the session. Even if a non-professional were to have agreed to take the photographs, Kerry said it would have been between "$10-20 for each picture taken." Their next alternative was to contact a local printer. International Printing of Hazleton said they would not quote a price over the phone, but even after that, it was never pursued.

Realizing the costs to produce a calendar with the funds of both clubs was impossible. Both clubs received only $47.00 each as profit from the contest. An idea to print a poster was introduced as an alternative idea. Again, International Printing would not quote a price, but at best, the poster would resemble this year's basketball poster. By the time both clubs would have been able to raise money for it, it would have already been well into the new year and the price of the calendar would had to have been reduced due to the months lost. Therefore, the calendar was not printed-- was it due to astronomical costs, or was it due to the fact that is was irresponsibly organized?

The next set of interviews involved the winners of the contest. I asked Robert Hagenbuch, Mr. February, and Chris Davis, Mr. April, if they were disappointed that the calendar was not printed. Both of them were disappointed, and in the words of Bushman, "both clubs screwed up!" Chris and Bushman said it was a good idea and that they would participate in a contest like this again, "only if it was not under the direction of the Ski Club and WCHB." When I asked E. J., Mr. PSU, about the quality of the show, he said that the organization was "excellent", but that the organization after the show, with regard to the calendar was "pathetic". Overall, E. J. felt that the calendar was "hyped up" to be more than it really was.

The winners were not the only ones who were disappointed and let down. The girls on campus, too, were let down. A survey was taken, and out of fifty girls, 80% said they intended on buying a calendar when they first heard of the idea. In order to print the calendar, Kerry said it would have cost over $10 a piece, and she said nobody would purchase it. Our survey proved her statement to be correct because only 28% said they would purchase a calendar if it was about $12.00.

Sorry, girls, no Mr. PSU calendars this year, but what about next year? In order for an activity like this to be successful in the future, all the clubs on campus should be involved. It is too expensive and it places too much of a demand in terms of organization for one club to be responsible for. Do not worry, though, because our survey said that 94% of you would like to see this happen again next year and who knows, maybe it will be Mr. and Miss PSU Calendar Contest next year, but only time will tell.

MR. PSU, TOO EXPENSIVE

OR TOO DISORGANIZED?

meet Paul Grazio

Paul Grazio was recently elected RHC's (Residence Hall Council) president. RHC deals with residence hall students in entertainment, movies, and events, plus deals with residence hall problems which club members report. RHC sponsors dances both in the South Hall lobby and in the commons, and plays a large roll in orientation.

Now that you know a little about the club, let's meet it's president -Smoothie.

As RHC president, what are your future goals and ideas to better the residence halls?

"Well, as club president I'd like to see improvements in both residence halls, favoring neither one. For instance, the North Hall needs a change machine and a game room or recreation center. The South Hall needs better washers and dryers. But basically I'd like to see more student interaction between both halls."

Are there any major programs going to be started? or any older ones improved?

"I'd like to see more lobby dances and continue more programs like that. I'd also like to improve the dating game, mainly by having it better publicized in the beginning of next semester when everyone won't know each other. I'd also like to see events where students and teachers could work together to better students and teacher relations. For example, a faculty breakfast in the North Hall conference room or a coffee session with the faculty in the dorms instead of the Hazleton Blue Lounge. I'd like to work with Mr. Redden in creating a study room in the basement of the North Hall Basement plus improve vending machines in both dorms. I'd also like to buy a VCR for North Hall.

But most of all I'd like to bring a sense of belonging to the club. And although it'll be hard, but I'd like to create weekend activities for those without a football game pass or mate.
