

Santulli , up close and personal

The one professor that we all know and love here at Highacres is Dr. Michael Santulli. Dr. Santulli teaches Philosophy and Humanity courses, and can usually be seen floating around campus between classes. Born in Brooklyn New York, Dr. Santulli had access to many different types of music. His favorite types include Jazz and Classical, while in literature, his favorite authors are Balzac, and William Faulkner. He has taught at Highacres since 1964, and lives with his wife and two children in Mt. Top. His educational background is quite impressive. After receiving his bachelors degree in chemistry from St. Francis University in New York City, he went on to get his masters in philosophy from Fordam, also in New York. Finally , he recieved his doctorate in Philosophy from Penn State.

Dr. Santulli's views on life are simple. He doesn't beleive in goals, and just tries to live his life the best way he can. When asked what he enjoys about teaching the most he said he thinks teaching is an "eternal fountain of youth", because the students stay the same age, even though he gets older. He feels that it's a constant challenge to teach. Dr. Santulli is a very dedicated professor, and we all as students should be thankful to have him with us.

Are you sick of paying outrageous prices for books at the bookstore and only getting a minimal amount of money in return when selling them back. How many of you have paid 40$ or more for a book only to get $5 in return? There has been a proposal made by SGA that would allow students to get a better deal on the sale of used books, the new proposal is this- during the first week of each semester students would be allowed to bring their used books into the commons getting a receipt for each one. Other students would then buy the books for a price set by either you or the organization in charge. A percentage of the sale would go to this organization and the rest would go to the student to whom the book origionally belonged. Any input or comments on this proposal can be brought up at the next SGA meeting to be held on April 21.

Joseph M. Boyle, assistant professor of accounting, will attend a series of conferences to be held in China in June at the US China joint session on Industry, trade & economic development. The meeting will bring together key industrial and economic leaders from all parts of China and the US to discuss issues of mutual concern and opportunities of mutual interest. This two week session will allow delagates to learn from the exchanges of ideas and will also allow them to update themselves on business oportunities in China.

Mr. Boyle joined Penn State Hazleton in 1967 as an accounting instructor. He holds a B.S. degree in accounting from Penn State and a MBS dgree from Scranton U.. He is active in community as well as campus activites such as The American Legion and The Penn State Hazleton Faculty General Assembly.
