Going on Vacation?

By: Roger Thrash

With the increasingly pleasant weather and the impending return of summer, many of us are already beginning to plan a vacation. On a student's budget and under the constraints of a summer or part-time job, finding the time and money to get away and relax is a potentially difficult task. In most cases, Europe or the Bahamas is out of the question.

But, you don't need to travel thousands of miles and spend hundreds of dollars to find that feeling of pure enjoyment and refreshment that a vacation brings. An easy and cheap method for evading the hassles of the every day is readily available at State Parks. Pennsylvania, for example has over 107 State Parks and Campgrounds located across the Commonwealth. Most other states have similiar facilities. Wherever you live, there is most likely, a state park, open to the public throughout the summer, within a one hour ride in most cases.

You don't need to purchase expensive camping equipment to have a successful trip. A tent and sleeping bag are the most useful items, but even those aren't absolutely necessary. A few blankets work as well as a sleeping bag, and if you can comfortably stretch across the back seat of your car, you don't really need that tent. Take the necessary food, and adequate clothing and you can be ready to go!

Most parks and campgrounds offer swimming areas, hiking trails, mountain bike trails, boating, fishing, or any number of other activities. Pack the materials and equipment for those activities for which you plan to take part. Don't forget your camera, because you will doubtlessly encounter exceptional photo opportunities.

Your cost for a night's stay at a state campground is about eight dollars! This means that you can get away for a long weekend (three days and two nights) for under fifty dollars. And that includes food and other simple items you may wish to purchase.

If you'd rather something more physically demanding, there are hundreds of backpacking trails across the state. This does however require the proper equipment and adequate planning. The State Department of Environmental Resources can provide you with maps and further information.

Do not despair because you have limited funds and limited time. A terrific respite is well within you reach. Grab the tent! Pack the hot dogs; don't forget the marshmallows! You deserve a break. Take the weekend off!
