

HAZLETON COLLEGIAN

Vol. V No. 4

Penn. State Undergraduate Center

Thanksgiving Dance

Soft lights, sweet music, and couples gliding smoothly over the floor. Yes, it's the annual Thanksgiving dance, which will take place tonight at the Hotel Altamont ballroom. The committees which include Jean Danks, Harriet Breisch, Barbara Kreisler, Irving Pollock, Wm. McNelis, Wm. Tito, John Doggett, Irwin Weinberg, and Bernard L. Zelman, have been working at full speed making preparations; and the crowning touch will be added to their efforts if a nice crowd appears. There are many good reasons why everyone should come, and it's certain that those who do come will see a few angels, and will go home believing more than ever that heaven is a marvelous place!

Jimmy McGuire and his orchestra have been engaged for the evening, and the music promises to be nice; incidentally, dancing will be from 9 to 1 o'clock.

Everybody's welcome to attend this affair; so come one, come all to the Thanksgiving dance.

The time was 7:30, the date was November 21, and the place was the Hazleton Undergraduate Center. Didn't we have wonderful entertainment? The freshmen deserve much credit for the program's being successful. They certainly put on a show. Besides the imitation of various classes of the Center, both students' and teachers' parts being ably taken by the resourceful freshmen, there were various specialty numbers: Jean DeMarco gave a monologue, Kenneth Greco, a vocal solo, and Jacqueline Kistler, a tap dance.

The part of the program which was presented by the sophomores was entertaining too. The Quartet sang several numbers; Jack Maher gave talk on beverages (wasn't that good?); and George Sholtis and Nancy Yost gave a modernized version of Romeo and Juliet.

The program was very successful, but the aftermath! Well, ping-pong, pinochle, and (ah!) dancing were enjoyed; and then, last but not least, refreshments were served. Of course there was more dancing; and believe it or not, the lights were out in Room 1! Just imagine!

Clubbing It

Even though most of our students are doing more than their share of "cramming" just before Thanksgiving recess as a final gesture of despair to bolster mid-semester grades, the various clubs of the Center are showing more than usual activity. The largest of these groups, the Photography Club, is now off to a flying start since it has been renamed the Hocus-Focus Club. A photographic demonstration was held for those members who needed enlightenment regarding the photographic process. New supplies for

(cont'd p. 3)