

THOSE WHO WORK—EAT

Last year after the Christmas holidays, students returned to the center aglow over a new project—their own recreation club, which was already to swing into action the next Friday. It remained only for a few names to be scratched upon the dotted line. Unfortunately, plans for the club vaporized, and there followed a weeping, a wailing and a gnashing of some teeth.

Eventually the club was forgotten. Every so often discussion groups are heard wistfully visioning another recreation club for the students.

Such a project, if it ever materialized, would probably fall flat on its face!

Some Cold Facts

Where are the facts to support this charge? They're down at the Y.M. indoor swimming pool on Thursday night when not one of 34 women students appears to take advantage of a much coveted privilege in the community. The facts stare you in the face in the two bowling alleys at the Y.M. reserved for the women Friday night. They echo through the barren Y.W. gym with a juke-box and smooth dance floor at the command of Club X. Ping pong tables, cards, dart boards and refreshment stand evidence no interest.

What is the Trouble?

Is it because these activities cost too much? On the contrary, fees are at a minimum; in some cases, reduced. Don't students have the time? Fraternities and sororities at the campus contradict that alibi. Don't students enjoy good, clean fun? Previous dances nullify that.

Therefore the student body is found guilty of the only remaining reason, lack of interest. Where do the students' interests lie? Students who do not participate in extra-curricular activities are not genuinely interested in their college!

A Challenge

You say this isn't true? It's your right to disagree. Here is a challenge, an opportunity to defend your school spirit. It's a challenge to you to swim and bowl at the Y, to pack Club X and to make things hum.

It's a case of put up or—that's right—do without the aid and co-operation of others if you won't go half way.

Center Group In "Hazleton Talent On Parade"

The Beth Israel Temple's "Hazleton Talent on Parade" show staged Saturday evening in the Hazleton High School auditorium featured eight of this city's entertainment groups.

Penn State Center's French puppet show troupe presented a fifteen-minute novelty act with students operating the miniatures and providing the speaking parts. The group has been directed by Emma Phillips, French language instructor.

A larger miniature stage was constructed for Saturday night's presentation and new puppets were made by the Art Department under the supervision of Art Carpenter, art instructor.

College Job Bureau Serves Students Here

Ralph Krecker

The Hazleton Center's Employment Bureau, operated by Economics Professor Ralph Krecker, maintains a constant contact with Hazleton's Merchants' Council and the city Chamber of Commerce. This college service, for use by students here, is being used as a clearing house for incoming requests for student part-time help.

Krecker pointed out that students desiring part-time employment can file this information with the college bureau:

1. Type of work desired.
2. Experience in work desired.
3. Hours available.

With the approach of the holiday season, there is usually an increased demand for student help in many of the city's business places. It will be through this service that requests will be passed on to the students of the Hazleton center. It has been advised that students who might be seeking holiday employment or part-time work throughout the year should submit the needed information to the student bureau.

The bureau headquarters are located in Professor Krecker's office on the first floor of the Walnut Street building. To date several positions have been filled with students through the school's employment clearing house. Desk clerking and radio station assignments have been among the types of positions taken over by center students.

Students To Plan Spring Schedules

Students returning to the Hazleton Center for the next semester, which starts in February, have been asked to fill out a tentative schedule of classes. These students will be interviewed by Frank Kostos, assistant administrative head in charge of scheduling.

This procedure must be carried out, according to Kostos, so that a general class schedule can be laid out for the entire school for the Spring semester.

Students who are eligible for transfer to the main campus at State College are to report to Administrative Head Amos Goss during the week of December 6.

Interview Schedule

This schedule has been issued for students remaining in Hazleton:

Week of November 29—all third semester students.

Week of December 6—All second semester students and first semester liberal arts students.

Week of December 13—All first semester students, except those taking liberal arts.

Both the offices occupied by Goss and Kostos are located in the Walnut Street building. It has been emphasized that this interviewing schedule be followed so closely that confusion be prevented.

Dance Next Fri. At City YWCA; Activities Planned

A college-wide social will be held next Friday evening in the Hazleton YWCA. This will be in the form of a dance with music by Larry Klatch's combo.

During intermission the Penn State Jesters will present a program of "Gay Nineties Review." Refreshments are to be available.

This is the first dance to be held at the YWCA and marks a change in Activities Board policy. The board, which staged previous dances in larger halls, believes the smaller hall, with other activities for non-dancers, will be better for the student body.

The smaller hall is cheaper, the board points out, and money saved can be used for refreshments. Dress for the affair is to be informal.

Fifty nurses and telephone operators have been invited to the dance. The hall is to be decorated by a committee made up of James Geffert, Grace Hepp, Mary Louise Pollock, and Beverly Silverman.

Other standing committee chairmen are: hall, Jack Sipple and Red Williams; band, John Wersinger and Williams; refreshments, Paul Pucillo and Burt Minchin; invitation, Ken
