

Merry Christmas

It's an old greeting, but the message is timeless. That message is what we want to say today to the students, faculty, and staff members. We are starting on a two-week vacation to give the fullest appreciation and use of that spirit which is found only at this time of year—"The Christmas Spirit." This inner glow, impossible for me to describe on paper, is, unfortunately not universal; for there are many hostile or indifferent forces abroad in this world. That is all the more reason why it is treasured by those who possess it. Keep the real Christmas alive this holiday season.

Join in the traditional carols and customs; practice good will toward all men.

Here at Highacres everyone will join their families, and leave behind the pressure of work and studies. We will practice the traditional Christmas customs—good cheer will invade everyday activities in this observance of Christmas and the "celebration" of the New Year.
