

ANOTHER HERO MADE; A MOUSE AND GIRL STORY

One quiet morning this past week, the jangling of the telephone in the office of librarian, music instructor, factotum Miss Pearl Garbrick tore her away from her music duties. A frantic, breathless voice that sounded as if it were coming from a high altitude gasped, "Is -- there -- a (gasp, gasp) janitor -- in the -- library?" Miss Garbrick replied, "No. What is the matter?" The gasping came back, "Mouse."

Came the hero. John Kurtz, fourth semester aged major with long experience in zoological matters heard the frightened cries and rushed into the main office to find Miss Ruth Donar, secretary, on top of the telephone switchboard and Miss Betty Spock, secretary-bookkeeper, on a desk. John took in the situation at a glance, knew what he had to do, and did it -- he picked up a one-inch (by careful measurement) mouse, and mercifully dispatched it.
