
 SCRAPBOOK(cont.)

The scrapbook is rounded out with articles and pictures published in the Hazleton papers which show the overall good will which exists between the cadets and the townspeople.

Much praise is to be given to Captain Carper and to the members of the AFROTS whose interest and imagination conceived and made up the book.

MORE BLISTERS

AFROTC ON THE MARCH

Once again our gallant cadets will brave the elements of a brisk October night as they march in the annual Nummer's parade on Saturday.

The parade will begin at 7:30 and our cadets are to meet at the Miner's Bank in West Hazleton at 7:00.

This year the group will be included in the first division of the parade and will have as their color guard, cadets Scott, Zemany, and Anthony.

ANOTHER JAIL BREAK

FROGS BUST OUT OF ZOO LAB

Congratulations to Mr. Steel! Last week he became the proud owner of fifteen jumping, healthy frogs. Some of these newcomers didn't like Highacres and "flew the coop", running around the Zoo lab for a while. The concrete floor didn't agree with them and all that escaped died before any one could return them to their watery home. To help keep the rest happy, Mr. Steel is feeding them fat, squirming meal worms. All these frogs are probably going to end up in experiments, so sharpen your knives because the dissection is COMING. Later this semester you're going to see two pairs of mice occupying the cage in the lab, enjoying their life at ease. Most of the animals were experienced travelers when they arrived here as they are sent through the mails from as far as North Carolina. At the rate of delivery that is going on now, we will have a Zoo, rather than a Zoology lab.

COLLEGIAN SCOOPS PLAIN SPEAKER

(EXCLUSIVE PERSONAL INTERVIEW.)

As many of you probably know, for two weeks now a number of live frogs have been inhabiting two aquariums in the zoology lab. These frogs, blissfully unaware that they are soon to be dedicated to science, have been arousing much interest among the students.

When interviewed, the frogs refused at first to make any comment. However, after a meal of live worms several frogs were willing to co-operate. They all agreed that Mr. Steel has been a perfect host and that life in our lab has been, on the whole, pleasant. There is only one thing which seems to disturb the frogs, (poor things). They are quite hurt by the girls' attitudes toward them. One frog, named George, complained that all any female ever said to or about him was "ugh". Another who wishes to remain anonymous, admitted winking at Jackie Cohn during a lab class last Friday, but she ignored him. What's wrong, Girls? Didn't you ever hear of the story about the frog that changed into a handsome prince?
