NITEHAWKS DUMP TECHNICIANS 9-1 TO TAKE SOFTBALL CHAMPIONSHIP.

Monday night, the Nitehawks, behind the superb one-hit pitching of Ivan Michaels, added the Technicians to their victory list. The only hit allowed by Michaels was a scratch single by Timinsky that deflected off the pitcher's glove. Thirteen opposing batsmen were sent down swinging to bring Ivy's strikeout total to 41 in three games. Smerconish, Bear, Pundi, and Snover had doubles for the Hawks and the remaining seven hits were divided equally. Members of the Championship Team are. Michaels, Raos, Turnbach, Frank, Atherholt, Snover, Kobrick, Taluskie, And Fueherer.

First game of the post season playoffs was forfeited by the S.P.A.'S. Thursday evening's game between the Technician's and Cottorpickers was postponed because of rain.

PARNASSUS INITIATION HELD

On Friday night of last week the Parnassus Honor Society held initiation for the new members. At that time the new members took the oath of Parnassus and also received their caps. The new members are Mary Jane Skoff, Lilli Junas, Ellen Iffert, Sherley Ray, John Burgraff, and Arthur Teel. Two members of the faculty also joined at this time. They were Mrs. Feigthal and Mr. Mattern.

After the initiation a social gathering was held in the dining room and refreshments were served. The elections for the outstanding Freshman and Sophomore were not held on Friday afternoon, but instead they were held on Friday night after the social gathering.

RACE TO NATURE MOVEMENT BEGINS

In case you're one of the students who hasn't been out absorbing nature with Sen. Steel's Botany classes, here is a quick flash about what is going on with these nature boys.

On Wednesday and Thursday of this week the Botany classes went out wandering around Old Sugarloaf in order to absorb some knowledge of the flora of the region. But, it seems, everyone around here believes that all work and no play makes a student a very dull person, so a little fun was needed to help liven up the trip. While the walk was in progress Art Teel and Jack Burgraff came to a little creek running in front of where they wanted to walk, so the studious Botanists decided to jump over the creek. Fleet-foot Teel cleared the obstacle, but Burgraff's center of gravity was a little too low and—well a wet foot now and then doesn't hurt anything, does it Jack? Jack DiLiberto found a caterpillar and thought that it would be a good present for Elaine Ferko, but Elaine (the snooty thing) just ran away every time Jack tried to give it to her. T.J. Anthony gave every one a rendition of some new song, I think it was called Boo-Boo-Bah-Bee—(that's in a foreign language undoubtedly) which made every one feel more ambitious to go out and find some sort of a rare flower. In fact every one was so enthusiastic to find one that they suggested that T. J. go all the way to Timbuctoo to look for one. (Somehow I got the impression that his singing wasn't quite appreciated by his fellow hikers) Carl Bysura was the busy one, for he was chasing all over trying to find some snakes (e-e-e-e-k) for Zoo class. Fortunately for every one, including the snakes, he wasn't successful. On the way to the mountain I hear that Bob Youri proved that his car had better brakes going down hill. It seems that he had a little trouble stopping for a turn while passing a truck.

One amazing thing about the whole trip was the fact that no one got lost in the wilderness. While Mr. Steel was wandering around a swamp everyone was afraid that Walter Smerconish had fallen in the water, or was about to. But fortunately, or do I mean Unfortunately, (o-o-o-ps) I mean fortunately enough he had his water wings with him so he was safe although he had a close escape.

After a few hours everyone returned to their vehicles and returned to the center well refreshed from the trip.
