

CHRISTMAS HINTGive Him a University Pictorial Calendar

The Penn State University engagement calendar for the University Centennial year 1955 is on display at the Highacres Bookstore, Miss Spock and Mr. Zerbe, have just informed the Collegian.

On every left - hand page is a 5x7 photograph of such scenes as Old Main, Highacres main building, Miss Penn State of 1954, the Mittany Lion, and other Penn State Campus scenes and buildings throughout the state.

On each right-hand page is a day-by-day calendar with space for writing in each day's engagements or reminders.

At $1.00 per copy, these Penn State engagement calendars will make appropriate, personalized Christmas gifts for families and friends.

You can order as many as you want (better allow one for your own use) now. See the calendar; then see Betty Spock today.

EVERYBODY'S DOING IT

Doing what? You ask. Well, it's something that has fascinated me and you since we first came to the center. Have you ever noticed what the students do when they enter the foyer? After checking for special notices on the bulletin board they stop at the entrance of the main lounge and look around. Now what confuses me is, why do they investigate the lounge? Are they looking for someone or for a comfortable chair? Maybe it's because they have just cut a class and are hiding from their instructor. Or maybe they are guilty of something and are hiding from Chippy. Could it be just a habit?

You are probably guilty of this very same thing, so what's the answer?

CHIPPY

Dear Everybody,

I hear that the Blass family is going to have a terrific Thanksgiving dinner. Mike shot a 14 pound turkey the other day. (Do we get an invitation Mike?)

Congratulations to Max Mehalick. He got himself engaged last Sunday.

In the same news, we heard that Steve Butcher has fallen in love. Is it true Steve?
