Penn State Mont Alto's annual "Fright Night Halloween Dance" gave students the opportunity to celebrate the holiday. Although the event got off to a slow start with only a few students making an appearance, more people arrived for the late night festivities.

Almost everyone came sporting a costume; notables were girls dressed as foresters, "I Dream of Jeannie," devils, Victoria's Secret angels, black angels, prostitutes, spring breakers and Tim McGraw. While others rocked the 80s, our very own Mont Alto ninjas made an appearance.

For an average CAMP event, it was a great turn out. People had an awesome evening filled with fun and all-night dancing with friends. There was plenty of music, but as with any other dance, it was the "YMCA" that brought down the house and not a single person in the room was standing still.

In the end, everyone took home memories of a great time. All who attended were very happy to have CAMP sponsor this event and look forward to it again for those who will be returning next year.

Fall Fest 2004

Mont Alto student groups get together every fall for fund-raising and fun. From getting a pie in the face to showing Nittany Lion pride, students supported campus organizations while taking a break from mid-terms and letting off some steam.

The Lion Ambassadors had a lollipop tree and gave out prizes for certain lollipops (one prize was a DVD player). Fall Fest went extremely well considering the weather. It was exciting to see the number of students who came out this year to participate in the festivities.

The Volunteer Club did a basket raffle which included a Penn State teddy bear and a mug, a "Jeepers Creepers" DVD movie, Penn State hat, bag of candies and other materials. We had pumpkin painting, cupcakes, brownies, and shirts designed by Nolan Fontaine, our vice-president. Fall Fest was great; we had a lot of fun even though it rained. The rain did not stop us from raising money for the club which we did very well. I had fun at Fall Fest. I am also the president of the dance team; we performed also at Fall Fest, which was great.
