

LION'S EYE UNFAIR, NEGATIVE ACCORDING TO SGA

by Jack Fingerman

SGA President Dennis George and Treasurer Mike DiSanto charged the Lion's Eye with printing "negative news."

"The editor changes every article, charged DiSanto, it is his article."

DiSanto said that he would like to see stories that involve every student, instructor, and administrator in the paper.

"Every charge that the Lion's Eye has made is false," said DiSanto.

"We must have activities to unite the students, said George, but we have limited facilities in which to work."

George said that the students can communicate with the SGA through the Gripe Box. This is a box that is located in the SGA office and is open for suggestions, improvements, and individual problems. Only a few students have used this service.

"The freshmen do not feel alienated," said DiSanto, we took a random survey of 25 freshmen to prove this point."

"We need more time to carry out our promises," said DiSanto. "The term is only 2 months old and the students should be more patient," he added.

"This campus will have 3 social functions. The SGA is in the process of renting the upstairs rolling rink for the November All Activities Day. A ski trip is being planned and we will have a semi-formal in the spring," George said.

"Every officer is carrying out the duties of his office," said George.

He said that the students should be blamed for the apathy and not the officers. "The students just don't

cont. on page 6

VAIRO, STUDENTS DISCUSS CFP

by Jim Delfini

Past failure of the Common Free Period (CFP) and the expense of lost courses were major reasons given for the administration's rejection of the proposed CFP by Campus Director John D. Vairo during a heated 45-minute discussion with students Friday morning in the lounge.

"An educational institution's primary obligation is an academic one," Vairo said. "We do provide opportunities for students to meet here and in the community."

Vairo explained it costs $15.95 per student per hour for this education.

"The first year we were here the CFP was used as a lunch hour by the students and faculty," Vairo explained. "The next year the students didn't even want one."

"If you belong to four clubs, it will still be difficult to meet with all of them in one common hour," he said. "The history of the CFP is one of the major factors in our decision."

Vairo outlined the reasons for the rejection in a letter to SGA President Dennis George which he "assumed was widely circulated by SGA."

George said, "The letter seemed invalid in many respects."

Fred Franklin, a sophomore asked, "If you weren't going to abide by the results of a vote, why did you let us have one?"

Vairo said he was given no notification of the proposed CFP and knew nothing about it until the day of the vote.

"I wouldn't have stopped the vote anyway," he said.

Franklin shouted, "What's the use? Discussion with you is impossible," then walked red-faced out of the lounge.

cont. on page 6