Letters To The Editor

In all the years of reading the "Lion's Eye," many have been well done, this issue is tops!

You and your advisor are to be congratulated on a good year. Thank you for your successful endeavors to publish an accurate and timely communication media. I know it has taken a lot to meet deadline while being pressured with classroom commitments.

Please let the "Lion's Eye" staff members know their endeavors are appreciated.

Edward F. Linder, Jr.
 Dean of Student Affairs

I congratulate you on the recent issue of the Lion's Eye. It was "newsy" the way a student newspaper should be. Keep up your good work.

Sincerely,
 John D. Vairo
 Campus Director

RE your printed request for comments on the "new look" of the paper, as evidenced by this week's issue:
 Super.

Joseph G. Biscontini
 Assistant Director for University Relations

Congratulations all around! This is a real college newspaper and everyone of you deserves a star in his crown.

Janet Alwang
 Faculty Advisor

SOPHOMORES:

Experience Nature

(File Photo)

Enjoy Springtime by visiting Ridley Creek State Park, not far from the campus. The park features nature trails, bike paths, horseback riding, and plenty of room for frisbee-ing, skateboarding, or just partying.

EDITORIAL

Two weeks ago we, as residents of Pennsylvania, experienced what experts are calling the worst nuclear accident to occur ever. It brought to our attention the painful reality that at least one nuclear power plant was not properly maintained. As a result a safety mechanism failed. That coupled with human error made for a near catastrophic disaster. Presently many groups are protesting around the country and the world, asking for nuclear power to be banned entirely. We, who are close to the infamous reactor site, have the most cause to call for such action. However, closing down all nuclear power plants and halting their construction of new plants is not the answer to the problem. Without nuclear energy the needs of the people, your needs, would be grossly curtailed. One must consider that nuclear energy is just an intermediate form until some other power source is discovered. Everyone complains about inflation and the gas and oil bills they pay. Take away nuclear power and everyone is in for an energy shock. The American people have demonstrated that they are not willing to cut back on their energy consumption unless forced to. By no means is nuclear power the answer to our energy needs for the future, but as it stands now it seems to be the only viable source for the large amounts of energy we, as Americans, demand. This is not to say that you shouldn't be outraged, frightened, and upset by the Three Mile Island Crisis. The more shaken you are the better. However, don't automatically clamp down on the nuclear power industry. We, as consumers, should be educated to problems such as these. They will only become worse in the future if we do not regulate and restrict them now. Being ignorant once can possibly be excused, but being ignorant twice is foolish if not fatal. Express your opinions on the matter after you educate yourself. Write your congressman or Senator. Make your voice heard. If you as an individual don't take action now you have only yourself to blame in the event of another Three Mile Island. The worst thing you can do is to settle back into your comfortable, electric, existence and let the "experts take care of it all." Call for the enactment of stricter, safer, nuclear power regulations.
