DCCC Opens . . . Finally

Delaware County Community College (DCCC) officials made a final contract offer to members of the faculty last week. The new contract was accepted - by a close majority - and the four-week walkout was ended.

The fall semester at the college, delayed since Sept. 4, began

Wednesday, Sept. 19.

According to a college spokesman, the new pact will give a flat $1,000 increase to instructors and $1,700 to full time professors this year. Next year they will get an 8 per cent increase, and the third year, the contract contains a wage reopening clause and the right to strike.

A 48-hour sit-in which was planned by students at the campus was cancelled as a result of the settlement.

According to a Student Government Association spokesperson, 6,500 letters were mailed to students asking them to participate in the protest, and to bring sleeping bags and games for the twonight sleepover in the main building.

School officials had approved the protest. "The administration feels the students have a right to express their concern and would be allowed to do anything within reason to make their point," a school spokesman said at the time.

The semester was scheduled to be cancelled if school did not start by Sept. 24. Trustees pointed out to students that they approved a tuition and fee refund policy in June 1979 if a semester had to be canceled by the college's inability to provide one lasting 15 weeks

AAA Urges Caution from Area Drivers

As schools open for the 1979 school zones. Young children on year, area drivers have a chance to contribute to the safety of our nation's children.

Keystone Automobile Club points out that now is one of the best times to aid the cause of the International Year of the Child observance.

Established by resolution of the United Nations General Assembly, the International Year of the Child officially recognizes the rights of children and encourages special programs on all levels to focus on the problems of children and the need to deal with them.

R.D. Hanshaw, Keystone's Traffic Safety Director, says that one fifth of all children between the ages of five and 14 who die in accidents are pedestrians. In its "School's Open, Drive Carefully" campaign, the AAA Club urges motorists to exercise caution while driving, especially in dian strip.

their way to school for the first time are particularly apt to dart out onto the road.

Other school-related traffic conditions that drivers should be aware of include: reduced speed limits in school zones, crossing guards and safety patrols at intersections, children on bicycles or darting between parked cars, parents stopping their cars in front of schools to drop the children off. and school buses stopping to load or unload pupils.

Drivers are also reminded that they are required to stop when they approach a school bus that has stopped to load or unload pupils, and remain stopped until children have crossed the street and the bus is moving again. This applies both in front and behind the bus, the only exception being on a divided highway separated by a me-sexes in the survey were surprisingly small. High school seniors, whether college-bound or not, are fairly tolerant of the idea of a man and woman living together without being married.

It may come as a surprise that, while illicit drug use is more common in this generation than in the past, the majority of today's youth still hold quite conservative views on the subject.

Why Johnny Can't Write

Professor Robert G. Weaver of the Pennsylvania State University says the reason many of today's college students can't write easily is that they don't learn it early enough. Weaver says teachers should start pupils writing in the second grade. "You have to start kids off writing things they read. You find good models for them, and they will fill copy books with writing, and this is one way to learn to write and spell. An hour or so daily devoted to this over a period of years will give children the confidence and ability to write," comments Weaver.

Cat Scratch Fever

Denton, Texas (AP) - Eight North Texas State University students, a campus policeman, and two area animal control officers are taking anti-rabies shots after being exposed to a rabid kitten.

Campus officer Tom Newell said the rabid cat was one of two kittens that ran wild among about 50 lunar-eclipse spectators Sept. 6. "I know four students were scratched and one had an open wound exposed to the kitten's saliva," he said.

Grass Stats

Nine percent of all high school seniors use marijuana daily, says a report recently released by the Department of Health, Eduation and Welfare. In the peak age group for users/18 to 25, three out of five people have tried marijuana at least once, and one out of four uses it currently. However, only 7 percent of people over 35 have tried marijuana.
