Paris Center for Critical Studies

NEW YORK — Among the hundreds of U.S. sponsored academic study programs in France, only the Critical Studies Program in Paris, in cooperation with the University of Paris III, focuses on current French theoretical trends in literature and film studies.

Established in 1973, the program originally examined film and film theory, including its history, formal structures, and relationship to the other arts. Today, through the sponsorship of a consortium of 22 U.S. universities and colleges, the program has expanded to include all visual arts as well as many social sciences while maintaining its original commitment to film.

The program's goal is twofold: to teach students to understand contemporary French theoretical trends in literature, philosophy, and film analysis; and to sharpen students' analytical skills by transcending the traditional barriers separating these disciplines through interdisciplinary work such as literature and philosophy, literature and painting, film and textual theory.

Courses are offered both at the graduate and undergraduate levels, on a fall semester, spring semester, or academic year basis. There is a minimum 2 year college-level French requirement for fall semester and academic year students, 3 years for spring students. Applicants must also have a minimum of two courses in either film studies, literary criticism, or communications.

For a descriptive catalogue, list of consortium institutions, and an application, contact the Council on International Educational Exchange, Academic Programs Department, 205 East 42nd Street, New York, NY 10017.

New Commons Building is More Than It Was Cut Out to Be

by Anna Giaurco
Sports Editor

The new Commons Building promises to be a popular place on campus next semester. This building will hold an athletic center, a gymnasium, a larger cafeteria, bookstore, offices for the P.E. faculty, and the new Continuing Education Center. The cafeteria will be furnished in a fashion that will also serve as a student lounge. Rumors of students having classrooms in the new Commons Building are not true. The only classes that will be held in the building are the assigned P.E. classes.

While the athletic center will have a complete nautilus system and a weight room, the gymnasium will be equipped with volleyball and badminton facilities, an indoor track, a complete basketball court, and six half-courts.

The building will be open throughout the week and possibly even on weekends. Priority for availability will be given to the P.E. classes, but signs will be posted to let the general population of the students know when the gym will be available. Requirements for entering the new facility (i.e. showing your student ID) have not yet been determined.

DILLINGHAM HONORED

Ms. Dillingham joined the Delaware County Campus staff in 1984. During her tenure at the campus, she has organized many interracial and cross-cultural programs to increase awareness and understanding of the diversity among people of all races. Some of the programs she has been involved with are Study-A-Thon, Cram and Jam and Smorgasbord.

She also has been actively involved in programs to commemorate Martin Luther King Jr.'s birthday and Black History Month.

She developed a comprehensive academic assistance Tracking Program, which provides advice, counseling and tutoring to students who need such services. The Tracking Program incorporates transition/adjustment workshops led by Ms. Dillingham with academic survival workshops offered by the campus advising/counseling team, input from faculty members, peer tutoring and academic advising by specially trained faculty members.

Taylor visits P.S.U. Delco

look to their parents and to draw strength from them. "The opportunities in life are out there. Maintain high expectations and set ambitious goals." "If one goal cannot be accomplished, have an alternative as a back up." With his record, Taylor has proven that having goals and working hard lead to success.

"Beware of drugs," he cited. Drugs and social diseases are proven pitfalls in this society. Drug abuse and social diseases are the number one problems plaguing our youth."

The history-making and thought provoking Taylor left the enthusiastic league with these words: "Remember your heroes. They are yourselves, parents, the church and the family."

HAVE A GREAT SUMMER!
