

Paintings by Tatyana Zorina On Display in Campus Library

By Robin Longaker

There is currently an exhibit of paintings by Tatyana Zorina on display in the Penn State Delco Library.

The Friends of The Tim Mark Endowment are sponsoring this event, and 25% of the proceeds from the sale of Zorina's paintings will be donated to their cause.

Zorina is a well established Russian artist whose paintings depict scenes from her homeland. The art exhibit features a variety of oils and watercolors. It will be shown until February 20, during normal library hours.

According to Dr. Cooper, Associate Professor of Biology at Delco, "This display is consistent with The Tim Mark Endowment because it provides emerging artists the opportunity to exhibit their work."

In addition, there is an upcoming art exhibit also sponsored by The Friends of the Tim Mark Endowment, which will feature over 70 artists from the area. This is scheduled to begin on March 7. More information will be available at a later date.

Watercolor with white tempera paintings by artist, Tatyana Zorina are being displayed in the library. This exhibit is sponsored by The Friends of the Tim Mark Endowment.

Photo by: Diana Miceri

Dear Maggie,

I'm a single, nineteen year old male. I have many female friends; however, there is one that I am particularly attracted to.

Do you think it would be wise to develop a romantic relationship with her? What about sex?

UNSIGNED

Dear Unsigned,

You should read the signals from her; yet at the same time you should be aware of the fact that you are friends. Take the situation from the way she acts. As far as sex goes Get A Grip! You guys are friends and if no one has mentioned sex yet then this may stand in the way of your friendship. Friends, good friends, never hold secrets so maybe you should just talk to her about the whole situation. Sometimes remaining friends is better than dating!

Maggie

Dear Maggie,

I've been going out with this guy off and on for four years; at one point we broke up because of this girl, we'll call her Miss "E". That was almost a year and a half ago. Now, she has come back into his life. The other day they went out to lunch and he didn't come home until late. How should I react to this?

Miss D

Dear Miss D,

First you should talk to your boyfriend and see what this "Lunch Date" was all about. I understand how you feel about her constant return into his life, but perhaps he really wants her back in it. Depending on how serious your relationship is will determine how much right you have to question. The ONLY reaction to give into is simply talking and serious thinking on your part. Since it has been done in the past what is to stop it in the future. Talk to him. Good Luck!

Maggie

Dear Maggie,

I have this sister and it seems I am always walking in her shadow. Everyone refers to me as her sister instead of my own name. This really bothers me yet I don't know how to deal with it. I love my sister because she is a great person and friend to me but I can't help but feel cheated. I don't even think she realizes how I feel about what's going on. I think she feels it's "Cute" but it's not! Tell me what the best thing to do is.

In The Shadow

Dear In The Shadow,

I am assuming that your sister is older, in which case it is very normal to be referred to as her sister. I, myself have an older sister, here on campus and everyone thinks I am her when we're not together. I know it gets very frustrating but your sister is not doing this out of anger—it just happens! Your sister is a good friend to you so just tell her it bothers you and maybe she can help you see that no one means any harm. Always remember you are your own person despite anything that happens, so keep your head high and don't turn on your sister.

Maggie

Dr. King Jr. Honored By Many

(Continued from Page 1)

influenced each of their lives. The quality that made the event so unique was that Mr. Coleman opened the floor to anyone who wished to volunteer their experiences; approximately 10 people contributed their thoughts.

After the last speaker was seated, refreshments, which included ice cream and a birthday cake, were served.

Following the refreshments, participants viewed the inspiring "I have a dream" speech.

The commemoration was held at 12:30 so that schedule conflict would not be a problem for students who wished to participate. The Delaware and Chester County community as well as Penn State students and staff were invited to attend.

"The event was held," according to Tammy Zampogna, "in order to celebrate Dr. King's accomplishments and to educate those who wanted to learn more about Dr. King."

Tammy, Beverly Lindsay, Pete Coleman, and WanJiru Kamau made the event possible.

Beverly Lindsay stated that, "It is important to observe Dr. King's birthday so that we don't forget. Because if we forget what he worked so hard to correct, history will repeat itself."

Professor Richard Betts, impressed with the turnout, remarked "This was an important occasion that was observed in a great way."

Dr. Tomezsko commented, "It was a celebration, not only of things that happened, but also a celebration of things to come."

In closing, Mrs. Lindsay stated that, "Each voice is important. We must speak up against oppression. Until we do, it doesn't matter what our race, religion, or even sexual preference; we are agreeing, we are giving our silent consent. Dr. King wasn't only fighting for black equality, but equality for everyone."

Portable heater unit causes a fire in the mailroom.

Photo by: Diana Miceri