

IF YOU'RE INTO COCAINE,
WE'VE GOT A LINE FOR YOU.

Now there's another tragic side effect of cocaine. It's called unemployment. Last year alone, America's businesses lost more than $60 billion to drugs. So this year, most of the Fortune 500 will be administering drug tests. Failing the test means you won't be considered for employment. And that's a little dose of reality.

Charity Pie-Throwing Set

By Andy McIntyre

A charity basketball game and pie throwing contest will be held in the gym on Monday, March 23. All events are sponsored by the Keystone Society and will be starting at 12:30. There will be a $1.00 admission fee, along with an additional dollar fee for each pie that is thrown. Half of the proceeds will go towards improving the Penn State

Delaware County Campus, while the other half will go towards the Leukemia Society of America on behalf of Phyllis Payne, the secretary of student services.

The basketball contest will be comprised of a team made up of faculty and staff versus a team of students. Anyone interested in participating should contact the Keystone Society President, Diana Miceri at ext.1241 in the Lion's Den, or Dr. George Franz at ext. 463.

Campus Sponsors 'Math Options'

will speak about their jobs, and explain how math and science are used in the workplace. The women will serve as mentors for the girls.

After the workshop sessions, there will be a break for lunch, and then a career fair will be held in the main conference room of the Commons building.

A question and answer session will take place at the conclusion of the program. This will provide the students an opportunity to speak with some of the workshop leaders, and also give them the chance to learn more about a chosen field of interest.

The Math Options '92 seminar is co-sponsored by the Pennsylvania State University and Women and Mathematics. It was held for the first time last year at the Ogontz Campus.

The main organizers for this event are Mary Kay Cote, Patricia VanLeuvan, and Tish Szymurski, with additional support from Joanne LeGar, Patricia Smith, and Linda Lewis.

Dr VanLeuvan anticipates that the Math Options program will be continued on an annual basis. She added that, "We plan to eventually help other Penn State campuses become involved also."

Let's Set Things Straight

By Peggy Cahall

Those of us who ride the bus to school already know that the ride is an endless journey. So when we meet up with a friend who also rides the bus, we engage in a lengthy conversation. Oh the joy of talking to someone to pass the time! Yet loud and very annoying conversations go on around us.

While on the bus the other day, I could not help but overhear a conversation that seriously bothered me. The person who was talking was criticizing the campus, very unfairly I think. There are many people (faculty and students) who do everything in their power to make our campus an exciting place to be. Then there are those who sit on the bus and criticize everything that the students have been doing to benefit the rest of us.

To correct one of the criticisms I overheard, the Lion's Eye is not a censored publication! The entire staff works hard, together, to put out a newspaper that will appeal to everyone's interests. Our campus is not only a campus; we are also a community of many different kinds, so no one has the right to judge someone's motives or the outcomes of their actions.

To correct the second overheard comment, Student Government is here for the Students. All the activities on this campus are held in the interest of the students. Granted, some of the things Student Government begins take a little longer to finish than others, but they never start something and just walk away. Anyone who hangs out in the Lion's Den could easily pick that up.

I get annoyed when I think that someone who knows little about the responsibilities of the Lion's Eye and Student Government could boldly sit on the bus and tear them apart!

A friend of mine also heard this conversation and instantly became annoyed. Both of us wonder why these "Talkers" don't discuss their criticisms with the organizations involved instead of insulting them without confronting them.

College is about learning and being mature enough to ask questions about something which doesn't meet your expectations. Let's learn our facts, people, and then criticize if it is necessary.

And in the words of many mothers, "Watch what you say because you never know who is listening!"
