Delco Women's Commission Holds Luncheon For All

By Judy Belson

The Annual Women's Commission Luncheon will be held on Thursday, March 30 in the Commons Conference Room from 11:30 am until 12:45 pm. All are welcome, and the cost is free. Male students, faculty, and staff, as well as females, are encouraged to attend. The luncheon is held during the Commons hour, so that it will be convenient for everyone's schedules.

The theme for this year's luncheon is Diversification, featuring the Annual Spotlight Award, which is presented to an outstanding woman on campus, and a panel which will discuss diversified cultural backgrounds. Anyone who is interested in attending this luncheon is asked to stop in or call Mrs. Shorter, the Women's Commission Chairperson in Room 106 Main, ext. 262.

The Women's Commission is not a new creation. It began in 1981, making this year its 12th year of serving the Penn State community. Each Penn State campus, according to Arlene Martin, the Delaware County Campus Liason Committee's Recording Secretary, has their own liason committee. All of these committees then meet at University Park with the Planning Committee. The campus committees are made up of one faculty member, one staff member, and one student member. The Women's Commission was designed as a forum to present and address the problems and concerns of women as a group on campus.

Dr. Tomezsko, Penn State Delco CEO, is a great supporter of the Women's Commission and its many accomplishments. At the Delco campus, the Women's Commission is currently investigating the idea of making available child care facilities for the Penn State Delco community. In the past, the Penn State Delco Women's Commission has had bake sales, the profits being donated to Domestic Abuse in Media and the Cultures of Africa, according to Diane Shorter, the PSU Delco's Women's Commission's Chairperson. As for Women's Commission achievements throughout all the Penn State campuses, they include helping to support the establishment of an undergraduate minor in Women's Studies; the establishment of the Center for Women's Students in 1985; and the Center for Adult Learner Services, which opened in 1983 at University Park.

The Women's Commission is a valuable part of the Penn State community, helping women at Penn State campuses - no matter if they are staff, faculty or students - to address common problem and concerns. The Women's Commission Luncheon promises to be an interesting forum for the three components of this campus to converge for an informal discussion and lunch. If anyone is interested in presenting a group concern at the next Women's Commission meeting, see Mrs. Shorter for information.

SCHOLARSHIPS AVAILABLE

Any sophomore, junior, or senior with a GPA of 3.0 or higher is eligible for a variety of campus awards and scholarships. A total of eight awards and eight prizes are available. See Dr. George Franz in room 123LLC if you have not yet been contacted. Deadline for applications is March 17.

Bring Your Popcorn Movies During Common Hour

By Artin Armani

Have you ever heard stories from your parents about going to a movie for 25 cents? Well, now you can tell your children the same stories.

If you haven't been informed already, currently you can see a movie for 25 cents in room 101 in the main building. A different movie is shown every week during common hour. Students can check out what movies are playing by looking on the activity calander across from room105in the main building

The exact movies that you paid six bucks to see elsewhere can now

Multimedia Classrooms Are The Wave Of The Future

By Kaspar Stromme

The buzzword of the nineties is multimedia. The integration of audio and video to present information is becoming popular in learning institutions. For students, learning has never been more fun.

But what is Penn State doing to stay on the cutting edge of this new trend in teaching? Over the last year, a multimedia package Penn State calls Technology Classrooms has been in the making. This package is now being implemented on select campuses in the commonwealth, among them, Delaware County.

Backed by a sum of money allocated to this campus, purchase orders are being placed. Once the equipment arrives, it will be placed in room 206 Main. This room will then be available this fall for use by several instructors.

With this equipment, instructors will be able to run complex presentations incorporating computer displays, video, and audio. Using software packages, they can develop their own presentations ahead of time, and then simply run them during class. Video clips, accompanied by text displays and diagrams, will replace the static overhead projector.

"As faculty and students begin experimenting with the computer and related media packages, the learning experience is sure to be enhanced" says A/V Director Mary Matus, "The multimedia package promises to provide a stimulating alternative to traditional lectures".

The classes that are expected to take advantage of the new room include several of the Earth and Mineral Science courses taught by Dr. John Ousey. In addition, certain courses in the College of Business, and some Liberal Arts classes are also going to be using it.

Hispanic Week Starts March 22

By Artin Armani

The cultural events of March start off with a bit of spice with Hispanic week. The week consists a cultural day, a food fest and appearances from two guest speakers.

Cultural day is on March 23 during which a food fest will take place in the main lounge of the main building. Different kinds of Mexican and Spanish foods will be served. All of the food will be prepared by students and some faculty members. The food fest is open to all students and staff for a low fee of one dollar.

"We are going to have all kinds of food like tacos, beans, and tortillas," commented financial aid assistant Sylvia Schaffer.

During this cultural week, there will also be two guest speakers visiting PSU Delco. The first speaker is going to discuss the effects of the outcome of the Presidential election on the Hispanic community. The second guest speaker Wilfredo Lopez, Director of Upward Bound at East Strausburg University, will talk about the situations that Hispanic students face in today's education system on April 7 at 12:30 in room 101mn.
