Love at first sight, or just hasty hormones?

Question: Do you believe in love at first sight?

—Blinded by Love

Doc Love: Love at first sight is, to some, being blinded by the light, like holding with hopeful hands air so tight. Fools in love will agree that due only to fate and chance, two who have met were always meant to be. But like how a budding rose, in the hands of He that knows, can see that only through time will two become love requited as their relationship blossoms and grows.

Mr. Hate: Love at first sight is haste at first taste (in my opinion) because you could be wearing the right perfume or cologne or you did your hair in a certain style that caught that person's eye. Don't believe the hype when it comes to love, because just like a rose blooms and it looks beautiful, it has thorns that are over shadowed by its precious petals and it eventually dies and fades away like a flame in the wind.

Question: I'm currently in a long-distance relationship. It's frustrating to see my girlfriend only once in awhile. Now she's becoming distant and monotone towards me on the phone. I'm really starting to get worried. What should I do?

—Holding on to what's gone

Doc Love: Hold strong. See her just one more time. Tell her how the stars shine bright around her eyes. How they whispered something nice, which almost made you cry: Home is where the heart is. Home is where you'll be. Home is where the heart is. Please don't you leave me. Home is where the heart is and there our hearts will forever be.

Mr. Hate: Home is where the heart is... yeah right pal, home is where you'll be while your girlfriend is starting to move on with her life. Personally buddy, I hope you realize that relationships require enough energy and time anyway so why are you trying to do this long distance. Yeah, yeah, yeah so you love her; love ain't gonna pay for the phone bills or her and you becoming more distant. You need to break it off because when you try to control things that are beyond your power, you become unhappy and right now you're not happy.

Question: My boyfriend is such a bum! He rarely takes me out anywhere and whenever we do go out to eat (usually McKee Dee's), he always somehow "forgets" to bring his wallet.

—Bummed out of love

Doc Love: Listen little flower, sometimes they say that love is its own reward. In the rays of love, one shines so bright. But, my dear, it takes two to Tango. Those whose reward is alone achieved does not think of the relationship they are in. Love allows one to shine bright, but with two, love darkens one if the other does not love the same. Simply, re-ignite or ignite a spark of romance between you two. If it's worth it, then work it.

Mr. Hate: This is exactly the reason why we have 'gold diggers' because its girls like this who are tired of dating guys like that. The cycle never ends.

Question: My long-time girlfriend recently told me that she kissed a guy at a party. She said it was completely accidental and it will never happen again. Can I trust her?

—Indirectly kissed another guys lips

Doc Love: Sometimes a rip can turn into a tear. Needle and thread can mend the hole but, like a scar, the sewing is still there. Take her hand, gently in yours, showing how strong you feel about her but also allowing how strong the pain she caused you. Forgive, but never forget. Remorse she may show, but only in time will you know the true meaning in her soul.

Mr. Hate: Look at things for what they are worth; if it were you who kissed a girl she would be pissed and you would never hear the end of it- right? I think all guys can agree with me on this one. There are two kind of women in this world, those that are good to you, and those that are good for you. Maybe you should see if your girlfriend is good to you or for you because there is a finite difference between the two. Plus you have to realize if your talking about trusting her then think about this; when determining a persons worth you should think if they are a liability, or a reliability.

Punch Drunk Love

Thomas Anderson (Boogie Nights) makes him more loveable than his previous roles.

Sandler is not the only one to give a great performance. Emily Watson plays Barry's love interest, Lena. Her level-headed attitude towards life gives a nice contrast to Sandler's nutty character, drawing in non-Sandler fans.

Punch-Drunk Love is, without a doubt, one of the best movies of the year. Don't be surprised if you see Sandler at the Kodak Theater on Oscar Night.

Imagine your life is a hum-drum existence. You're not very smart, you have low self-esteem, and when you're at a low point, you break out in fits of violence and trash public restrooms. You feel like your place in the universe is kind of pointless.

Then you meet the girl of your dreams and you feel like life is worth living. That is how Barry Egan feels in the dark romantic comedy, Punch-Drunk Love.

Comedian Adam Sandler plays Barry in a performance that will surprise Sandler fans. He still comes off with his crazy persona, but the story and the directing of the film by Paul

Monsters, Inc.

Picture this: you're eight years old and your mommy and daddy just gave you a kiss good night. As you start to fall asleep, you hear a strange sound coming from your closet. Then you see a scary looking monster with five eyes and claws and a lot of fur!

Give him a break and scream, he's only doing his job.

Disney / Pixar's latest collaboration, Monsters, Inc. explains the real reason why there are monsters in your closet. In the movie, there is a whole other world where monsters live peacefully behind the doors of every little kid's closet, and like every world, they need a source of power. That's where our heroes, Sulley (voice of John Goodman) and Mike Wazowski (voice of Billy Crystal) step into the picture.

Sulley and Mike work for Monsters, Inc., the premiere energy corporation of Monstropolis. They collect the screams of little children, refining them into power for their world, hence the monsters in the closet.

All hell breaks loose when a girl named Boo (voice of Mary Gibbs) accidentally enters the monster world, forcing Sulley and Mike to try to get past the CDA (Child Detection Agency) to get Boo safely home. The result is a crazy adventure through the monster world.

Goodman and Crystal steal the show in this computer animated flick with their great sense of comedy. Steve Buscemi puts a shiver up your spine as the villain Randall, and John Ratzenberger makes a hilarious appearance as the Abominable Snowman.

This is a must see for everyone, especially college students who need a good laugh. Monsters, Inc. is available now on video and DVD, featuring bonus footage.

IT'S IN THE STONES

By JENNIFER RUFO

Something different this month is modern birthstone horoscopes. Contact Jennifer at JLR397@psu.edu to let her know which format you like better.

January: Garnet - You have adapted to new changes quickly and easily, but be prepared to experience some friction with your new surroundings. Don't forget your roots. Seeds cannot grow without water.

February: Amethyst - A loved one wants to take a step further with you. Do it if you want to, but if you have any doubts, talk about it. Money is a factor with this person, either in a helpful way, or in a bloodsucking way. You decide.

March: Aquamarine - Watch out for bodies of water this month because they might be hazardous to your health. Fires warm the heart and soul, but only if you are willing to be thawed out. Don't push people away, welcome them to your fire.

April: Diamond - If times are rough, you will find your way out. Use your intuition and what you once thought impossible will become real. Live it, love it, and learn it because your intuition is in a developmental phase.

May: Emerald - Follow the road to a new and wonderful experience. Don't be afraid, because fear will cause you to lose this once in a lifetime opportunity. Love and fortune are easily had, yet easily lost. Tread lightly.

June: Pearl - People will notice you. You don't have to say much, just making an appearance says a lot to those around you. You know when to stand up for what you believe in and when to keep your mouth shut, good traits to have.

July: Ruby - Take time to do something that you have always wanted to, but haven't had time lately. The experience will be rewarding and worthwhile. Just don't take advantage of it. Too much indulgence could hurt you.

August: Peridot - You might want to rethink your desire. Is it really what you want, and is it really good for you? An objective standpoint will help clear your mind, but people are always around to talk to you if you need some help.

September: Sapphire - You are deep in thought this month. Think about ways to change things that you don't like for the better. Dedication will pay off this month with a romantic partner.

October: Opal - Now that the scary side of you is out, you have admirers for your courage. One of them is an outlet for you into the romantic world. Proceed with caution because he or she might get scared away.

November: Topaz - Happy Birthday! Be careful what you wish for when you blow out the candles on your cake, because it just might come true. Your humor attracts, but watch out for those with two faces, because there are two sides to everything.

December: Turquoise - Late nights are going to catch up to you but your work ethic is exemplary. Taking a risk around the holidays is frivolous, so wait until no one is looking. Show others what you have to offer when you are successful.
