"We are having a great season, and we have a good chance of going to the nationals this year," said Pat Cleary, team forward. This year, that good chance turned into a certainty.

The PSU Delco hockey team started the season strong, and hasn't lost their momentum. With 14 wins, five losses, and no ties, the PSU Delco team took first place in the Delaware Valley Collegiate Hockey Conference (DVCHC).

Other teams in the league include PSU Berks, Widener, Rowan, Gloucester County College, St. Joseph's University, Bryn Athyn College, College of New Jersey, LaSalle University, Temple University, Millersville University, Bucknell University, Franklin and Marshall, Lafayette College, and Kutztown University.

Now gearing up for the Division III Nationals in March, the Nittany Lions are looking to be taking a trip to Michigan to Muskegon Community College. The tournament will start at 7:30 in the morning on March 6, and end March 8.

If the team makes it into the tournament they will be entering as one of the three top teams in the American Collegiate Hockey Association (ACHA) Atlantic Division.

"We're probably going to get charter buses for the team. I know from experience, that it's going to be a long ride to Michigan on a bus," said Doreen Hettich-Atkins, director of student life.

Good luck guys.

Tough loss against Rutgers

On Jan. 25, the PSU Delco Hockey team hosted Rutgers at Ice Works, on Dutton Mills Road, in Aston, PA.

Penn State seemed to own the first period, including the penalty box.

Pat Cleary led off the game with the first goal, and Ryan Cell recieved the first penalty.

The high spirits in the seats faded though, when Rutgers revisited the goals upon Penn State two-fold, scoring consecutive goals, one by Rutgers' William and the other by Marelo.

The second period was a tribute Rutgers' defense. Despite playing with at least a one-man disadvantage for most of the period, Rutgers held Penn State to one goal, made by Matt Bedwell. And holding true to form, Rutgers answered up with a goal from Baily.

Rutgers spent most of the third period on the defensive, displaying once again their man-down defense, spending a third of the period in a two-man disadvantage and holding Penn State to no goals. Putting the nail in the coffin, Seiden of Rutgers put one last goal in past Jeff Wild, the Penn State goalkeeper. Tempers flared, and the fans were delighted by a very physical last period.

"I'm just sorry we didn't win it for you guys," said Pat Cleary, forward.

Four cool ways you can save some high-tech bucks

By JONATHAN LEONHARD

For the Lion's Eye

I'd like to dedicate this issue to my favorite topic: Saving money. As Penn State students, you are offered many services that can save you money, such as free web hosting or free dial-up service. I have noticed that these services, while readily available, go unused. At first I thought that students wanted to pay for things they can get for free, but this went against the "poor college student" model that many of us portray. So the other conclusion was that they simply didn't know about them. Well, the objective of this issue is to educate the student body to some of the services offered to them. That way, we can have more utilization, and wealthier students.

1) Web-based training. Perhaps the best kept secret in Penn State, these web-based tutorials teach many technology concepts, programming languages, operating systems, and applications. The system has even been updated to offer courses in management topics, career topics, and personal improvements. All you need is your user ID and password to gain access from anywhere. The tutorials are anywhere from 5 hours to 10 hours each, or more. You can take them at your leisure, and the site will remember where you left off if you quit and come back again. With the new and improved version of the site, you can even download the tutorials and view them off-line! Web-based training can be accessed at: <http://www.wbt.psu.edu/>

2) Personal Web Space. Penn State offers every student, staff member, faculty, and club free web space for a web page. This page can be used to put anything an individual wants to express on the web for all to see (with some legal restrictions). In order to procure your slice of the web space, you must first pass a 5 question on-line test to make sure you understand the rules and terms of your web space. After that, your request is submitted, and in 3 business days you have your space! Now all you need to do is learn HTML. But wait! There's a web-based training topic on beginning HTML. Now you can see how these things fit together. Anyway, your Personal Web Space can be accessed or attained at: <http://personal.psu.edu/> You will need to download a secure FTP client if you wish to access and update your page from home. You can find this FTP Client on the ITS discs that Computer Services gives out.

3) Free Dial-up Access. Students are entitled to free dial-up service at any Penn State Campus. This means you can connect to the internet, get your email, IM your buddies, or download files without having to pay AOL, MSN, or any other Internet Service Provider (ISP). This service is only available while you are a PSU student, so take advantage of it while you can! All you need is a computer with a modem, and a phone line. Stop by Computer Services for an ITS disc (a cd-rom) and an Internet Connection Guide. CAUTION: Make sure the number you call for dial-up is in your local calling area, otherwise you will be charged by the phone company! FYI: Penn State Delco's number is 610-892-7147.

4) Cheap Microsoft Software. Finally, as a PSU student, you pay a computer user fee. Ever wonder where that goes? Among other things, it subsidizes PC and software purchases, including Microsoft products. By this license agreement, you are entitled to purchase a copy of Office XP, Windows XP, or Visual Studio.Net. These titles are yours to keep, for the low low price of $30. To get the software, you must visit www.computerstore.psu.edu.

I hope this has given some insight into the many services that Penn State offers its students. With a little looking around, you may be able to find many, many more. Questions? Comments? Ideas for the next issue? email JGL115@psu.edu
