SBA has plans for spring

In the end of January 2005, the Student Business Association will be hosting a Super Madden Bowl Tournament to raise funds for the Dr. Stout Reflection Garden.

This will be a Playstation Madden 2005 football tournament held in the commons building in the last week of January leading up to the NFL Super Bowl.

Other spring semester events include: guest speaker Kevin Nolan, president of Nolan Painting, Inc on the topic of entrepreneurial endeavors and leadership management, an education support trip to a local Fortune 500 business, and community activities along with additional fundraisers.

Exact dates and times to be announced. Contact SBA President Gina Ermilio at GME110@psu.edu for more information.

IST Club plans spring events

The IST Club will have an informational seminar in January on the online resources (eLion, ANGEL, Webmail) available through Penn State and how to use them. Anyone interested is invited to attend.

Also planned is a tour in March of SAP, a leading software development firm.

In late semester, the club will hold the "LAN party." The number of people allowed to participate is between 50 and 60. Those interested will have to get their names in as soon as possible. Specific dates will be announced. Contact Samantha Reeseey at SMR300@psu.edu if interested.

Free lunch with NCF

The Nittany Christian Fellowship, or NCF, meets every Thursday at common hour in Room 206 in the Main building. NCF always provides a free lunch and discusses current events to a passage in the Bible.

Events have included a few nights of meeting at local places to meet other Christian groups from other schools, such as Delco Community and Widener.

Also planned are two weekend retreats to Long Beach Island, N.J., and Washington, D.C. Interested students can email Jim Kinney at JCK212@psu.edu

JSL plans spring activities

The objectives of the Jewish Student League are to promote understanding about Jewish cultures and societies and Israel. The club boasts membership by students of all religions and ethnic backgrounds.

These members are actively working not only to increase awareness of current issues, but also to promote the acceptance and understanding of other religions and religious organizations on campus and in the community.

Upcoming events include a trip to the Holocaust Museum in Washington, D.C., April. 15 and a Passover luncheon April. 19.

Contact founder and president Ron Oz at rono@comcast.net for more information.

Martial Arts Club welcomes members

The Martial Arts Club meets every Tuesday and Thursday from 11:30 a.m. to 12:45 p.m. in the auxiliary gym. It practices various types of martial arts and welcomes all forms. No prior experience is required.

If interested, come out and see what it is all about and be ready to participate. Please wear sweat pants and shirt or martial arts uniform.

In the near future, the club hopes to have a board breaking demonstration. Any questions can be directed to Wayne Williams at WPW500@psu.edu.

Penn St. hockey club adds fuel to the fire on ice

After more than a month without games, the Penn State Delco ice hockey team made a triumphant return over the winter holiday with back-to-back wins on home ice.

On Jan. 7, the team defeated Kutztown University, 7-4. The victory provided retribution for a game earlier in the season which resulted in not only a loss, but a serious knee injury for senior captain Thomas Fischer, which is still healing.

On Jan. 8, the team defeated Rutgers-Camden, 7-4, with notable performances from freshman goalie Christopher Dalvano, forward Michael Kelly and defensemen Dan Baer and Myles Peterson.

The weekend also introduced new players Mike Tremonte (four goals) and Si Swing (two), both displaying impressive offensive skills during their first games.

Tremonte played for the Delco team two seasons ago, and was named league MVP. His Friday night hat trick and several assists confirmed that his break from hockey has not left him too rusty.

"The new players have had an instant impact on our team," said goalie Jeff Wild.

"We needed them so we'd have more lines available," said Ryan Cell, forced to view the game from the stands, nursing a persistent knee injury.

The games against Kutztown and Rutgers-Camden were preparation for Delco's tournament trip to Florida Gulf Coast University.

The team competed in the Compuware Gulf Coast Clash Jan. 14-16 in Estero, Fla. The Lions headed south without several key team members due to injuries and other obligations.

"We'll be missing a lot of players," said senior defenseman Ryan Meade.

"But our team has an incredible amount of stamina. I think we can still do well."

Delco was the only northeastern school selected for the tournament, along with Florida Gulf Coast University, University of Texas, and University of Central Florida.

Ranked first in the Atlantic region of the American Collegiate Hockey Association (ACHA) division III standings, the Delco squad is eager to exhibit its skills in Florida but recognizes that the unfamiliar teams will pose a challenge.

"I wish we could go at full strength," said Fischer. "But we'll do our best."
