It's time to pull out your leather jackets, booties, statement blazers and oversized scarves—eye peeling essentials—both current and future. Of course, creating the right high street-high fashion mix is extremely important, so try to incorporate old looks with new—for a runway to real-way combo. Another fashionable hint: Look for fresh updates to match well with your go-to pieces—favorite boyfriend jeans or vintage tee.

Trendy headpieces are in—inspired from the 19th century. Hot pieces this season are: lingerie-inspired dresses, preppy styled stripe shirt with chunky chokers, flirty shirts with variations of arm detail: strong and/or ruffled shoulders and puffy sleeves all make the grade, leather skirts—for a classic rocker look—and, the perfect accessory, for a runway-Hollywood-polish, incorporate ruby-red lips.

Top 5 Fall Looks:

1. Autumnal shorts with opaque tights and a statement blazer.
2. Lace-up booties and an intricate chunky choker
3. A bold-shouldered top or feminine ruffled blouse (basic black).
4. Must-have boyfriend blazer with cuffed and/or rolled sleeves.
5. Leather Moto jacket with studs.

Before reading any further, it should be known that this is not a review of a movie about a love story. No, this is a review of a movie about a story about love. Directed by Marc Webb and written by Scott Neustadter and Michael H. Weber, (500) Days of Summer is the story of Tom Hansen (Joseph Gordon-Levitt), a greeting card writer in some unnamed city, who meets Summer Finn, the new administrative assistant at his office and quickly falls in love with her.

The problem is that Summer (Zoey Deschanel) does not believe in love and believes instead that "real life will always get in the way." The story is purposely out of order chronologically and details the rise and fall of their relationship. Tom does his best to break down the mental barriers that Summer has so obviously put up, while Summer pushes further and further away from Tom.

The difference between (500) Days of Summer and other films that could be grouped into this genre, the unconventional love story, is the incredible job the movie does of evoking the emotion that you are meant to feel at different points throughout the movie. It is real in a way that does not seem to be explored as much as it should be in a lot of ways. The story is very strong and the director takes it in some very dynamic directions

(see: split-screen scene). Whether you relate to him or not, you can really feel the deterioration in Tom as he soon realizes that the girl of his dreams is slowly breaking his heart. Joseph Gordon-Levitt is fantastic as Tom. He pulls off the hopeless romantic and is still able to spin it into the vengefully desperate when things start to get worse. Zoey Deschanel fits in so easily as the girl you wish you could hate if it were not for her subtle beauty and impeccable music taste. The soundtrack is exceptional; easily it is the best I've heard in a long time (Take that, Nick and Norah's Never-ending Sucklist!).

I cannot think of anything bad to say about this film. So I will blame it for turning my darling Zoey into a villain and for breaking my heart in the way only a film can... then, SURPRISE ENDING! I guess you will just have to see it. Now let us all hope for (500) Days of Autumn!
