

Eye on Sports

PSU Brandywine Women's Basketball

By Karlo Radolovic - Lion's Eye Staff Writer - kar5165@psu.edu

The Lady Lions are looking for their fourth straight division title in as many years going into this season. In the past seasons the Lady Lions have put together an impressive resume: Three straight division titles, appearing in three straight finals fours, and one conference title.

Head coach Larry Johnson of Media, Pa is entering is fourth season as the head coach of the have been putting together important wins in their division which hopefully will lead them to another conference title.

The Brandywine Lady Lions have beaten some quality opponents during the course of the season this year. They have impressive victories over York, Abington, and Briarcliffe. The team's last big and impressive victory came against Dubois at their home court.

The Brandywine Lady Lions Basketball Team
(Photo Courtesy of Penn State Brandywine)

Penn State Brandywine Women's team. He will be looking to get his team back in the hunt for another division title. The women's team overall this season is 8-8, and they are 6-1 in the PSUAC. They ladies

If coach Johnson wants his team to go back to the promised land, then he will be looking to get his team to have more impressive wins as this season progresses.

Philadelphia Eagles: Decisive Offseason Awaits

By Justin Park - Lion's Eye Sports Editor - jrp5321@psu.edu

As it stands now, the Philadelphia Eagles have three quarterbacks heading into the 2010-2011 NFL season. All three are not signed pass that season, meaning the time for decisions regarding the future of the franchise.

The current starter, Donovan McNabb, insist that he would like to finish his career as an Eagle. McNabb will be making $10 million next season and would need a contract extension after that. McNabb has taken the Eagles to one Super Bowl in his tenure in Philadelphia and continues to make the same in-game mistakes. McNabb is 33 years of age and isn't getting any younger. Maybe a change of scenery would benefit both the Eagles and the veteran quarterback.

However, the Philadelphia Eagles selected Kevin Kolb as their first pick in the 2007 draft for a reason. The 25 year old quarterback has been "seasoning" on the sideline for the past three seasons, waiting for his opportunity as a starter. Kolb has impressed many in his brief time starting for the midnight green in the 2009 season. He threw for over 700 yards and four touchdowns. Kevin Kolb has said that he is ready to be Donovan McNabb and Mike Vick are likely to be moved this offseason.

(Photo Courtesy of sports.yahoo.com)

Bryant Returns Home to Handle Struggling Sixers

By Steve Scoleri - Lion's Eye Staff Writer - sds5084@psu.edu

Lower Merion high school star Kobe Bryant was surprisingly met with many cheers as he took on the Sixers over a sold out crowd. Of course there were the classic Philadelphia boos mixed in with the cheers but for the most part Kobe played in the Wachovia Center with many Lakers fans. The fact that Bryant remains Philadelphia's most successful current NBA-er only helped spread his fan base in the stadium. The Sixers did come up on the short end losing the game 99-91.

even some MVP chants mixed in when Kobe touched the ball. After the game Kobe was even shocked with all of the positive support he was getting from the crowd.

This was another tough loss to swallow for the Sixers who continue to play well but keep coming up short. The biggest problem is their inconsistency and their inability to close out games. This is their third straight loss to drop them to 15-31 on the season.

With this losing record and

Bryant jumps for a rebound against the Philadelphia 76ers
(Photo Courtesy of sports.yahoo.com)

Kobe Bryant started out the first half only scoring two points but ended with a game high 24 points. Allen Iverson played well in the Sixers loss. He had a team high 23 points and kept the crowd into the game by defending Bryant one on one. The two all-stars battled it out for their respective teams.

It was a great night to see one of the best basketball players in the game come home and put on an exciting show for the crowd. Every time Kobe scored most of the crowd was in cheers which is uncharacteristic of Philadelphia fans. There were the trade deadline approaching, the Sixers might be moving some pieces trying to improve their team anyway they can. They have a young team who works hard but in the wins and losses column they are one of the NBA's worst teams. Team General Manager and President Ed Stefanski will have his hands full with the February 19th trade deadline approaching.

Possible trades that have been discussed center around forward and star player Andre Iguodala, who is likely to be traded to Houston, Dallas, Phoenix, or Minnesota, among other places.

the Eagles starting quarterback.

Then, there is Michael Vick. The Eagles seemingly helped him back on his feet and gave him the opportunity to show that he can still play in the NFL and now the 29 year old QB also wants a starting job. Vick signed a two year deal with the Eagles last August and will be making $5.2 million in 2010. He will likely be moved before the season begins in September.