

Confusing Law on Farm Pond Fish Needs Changing

HARRISBURG — Soil conservation district directors at their conference here were told by William Voigt, Jr., executive director of the Pennsylvania Fish Commission, that he favored early amendment of the present "confusing" law relating to fishing in farm ponds.

Owners of farm ponds should be able to say who shall fish in their ponds "without the present nuisance procedure of getting a permit," he declared. At present a farm pond owner may not allow relatives and friends to fish in his pond unless he gets a permit from the Fish Commission, he explained.

Urges More Ponds, Dams

Voigt also won approval of the farmer soil conservation directors when he urged the building of more farm ponds and small dams, also his stand for a state water control law in Pennsylvania to regulate use of water, especially from streams.

Dr. Maurice K. Goddard, State Secretary of Forests and Waters, addressing the soil conservationists here later also pointed to the necessity for regulation in the use of water from streams so that users downstream would not suffer.

For their outstanding soil conservation work during the past year Michael and Walter Gresch, Ebensburg, RD 2, Cambria County won first award from the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad Company. They operate a 150-acre dairy farm. Second place went to J. Paul Stewart, Coraopolis, Allegheny County. The awards were pre-

Canned Tuna Handy Item for Cupboards

Canned tuna is a convenient and reliable food item, reminds Helen Denning, extension nutrition specialist of the Pennsylvania State University.

Healthful and economical, tuna fish takes a regular place on many family menus. It's an ideal food when the menu requires a quick change for unexpected guests.

Canned tuna is available in three different styles of pack — fancy or solid contains large pieces ideal for cold plates; chunk style sized just right for salads; flaked and grated for cooking. Several cans of tuna on the cupboard shelf are ready for

Eastern States Name Delegates To 1956 Meeting

John Wenger and Alternate Alvin Moyer will go as delegates of Eastern States Farmers' Exchange to the 1956 Annual Meeting in Springfield, Mass.

The two men, from Reinhold Station, were elected at a meeting of about 100 farm folks in the Schoeneck Fire Hall Nov. 17. Two other delegates, from the Richland Station, Harry E. Fertig and Alternate Paul Weiler also were elected.

"Getting the Most of Our Grassland in a Good Grassland Production Program" was the subject of an address by Clark Clemmer of the Springfield office. Norman Leninger, Reinholds, reported on last year's annual meeting, and Earl Groff, Lancaster, discussed new items in "Modern Nutrition for Livestock." Local fieldmen Harold Mengel, Lancaster, and LaVerne Pownall, Quarryville, also reported.

Last Friday 250 farm folk from the Ephrata Station met at Akron Fire Hall for their local annual Eastern States meeting. Chairman was Abram Hoover. Members elected to the 1956 annual meeting Mahlon Martin and Alternate Carl Martin. Mr. Clemmer discussed various phases of Eastern States Seed Service. Mr. Groff told about livestock nutrition, and the two field men reported.

The top economist of the International Monetary Fund reported that conditions for freer exchange of foreign currencies into dollars were "rapidly being achieved."
