Treated Oats Seed Unsafe As Stock Feed

STATE COLLEGE, Pa.—Seed oats that have been treated with any of the various seed protectants should not be fed to livestock or poultry, even in relatively small quantities, according to a warning from Pennsylvania Crop Improvement Association Secretary, Harold Swartley. These seed protectants are poisons and may injure or kill livestock which consume this seed.

Numerous farmers during previous years have mixed leftover poisoned seed in their livestock and poultry feeds, believing that no harm would result if the ratio of poisoned to pure grain was very low. This practice has definitely proven costly to some farmers.

Although a low concentration of treated grain may not be toxic enough to kill livestock or poultry consumption of this grain may cause livestock to go off feed for several days, and poultry may cease to lay eggs or they may produce eggs with a poor color or bad taste.

Instances of feeding poisoned grain have been reported in which all eggs for a several week period were unsaleable and unpalatable, apparently because of some chemical reaction which tainted the eggs.

Farmers should take special precautions when disposing of surplus treated seed. Either it should be securely stored until the next season, or else it should be buried or burned in order to prevent its consumption by either domestic or game animals or fowl.

Chicks Flown To Many Foreign Lands by Logans

Baby Chicks from Chester County, Pa. are becoming known world wide, according to L. L. Logan, hatcheryman, Kennett Square, who has shipments going to points such as Rome, Italy, Luzerne, Switzerland; Hamilton, Bermuda; Georgetown, British Guiana; Trinidad, British West Indies; Port-au-Prince, Haiti; Mayaguez, Puerto Rico; Terceira, Azores; Caracas, Venezuela; Manabi, Ecuador; Belize, British Honduras and many other points in South America, Mexico and the Caribbean Area.

Chicks can travel by air rapidly and safely. Flights leaving Idlewild Airport at 5:30 arrive in Rome the next day at 2:30 Rome Time, which would be 8:30 a.m. EST or a total travel time of but 13 hours.

Mr. Logan also ships by air to distant parts of the United States. He also delivers considerable distance by truck, recently delivering as far as points in Texas, with the remarkable record of but four dead chicks on a total load all the way to Garison, Texas.

PETERBOROUGH, N. H.—A registered Guernsey cow, Herberts Willing Realty, owned by Herbert Schaffer, West Chester, Penna, has completed an official production record of 10,062 lbs of milk and 468 lbs of fat.

This production, made in the AGCT's Herd Improvement Registry, is equal to 4850 quarts of high-quality milk.

State Potato Seedlings In Mexico Tests

PROGRESS REPORT NO. 43
Pennsylvania Agriculture Experiment Station The Pennsylvania State University
University Park, Pa.

Pennsylvania potato seedlings will be tested in the highlands of Mexico this year again as the search for blight-resistant varieties moves into a new phase. Since 1952 several hundred Pennsylvania seedlings have been tested in Mexico and results are so promising that over 4,000 will be tested in 1956.

Dr. Wilford R. Mills, a plant pathologist and potato breeder at the Pennsylvania Agricultural Experiment Station spent the summer of 1952 in Mexico studying potato growing conditions there. He found that specialized races of potato diseases are more numerous in Mexico and that weather conditions during July and August are ideal for blight development.

For many years, Dr. Mills has been testing his many lines of potatoes for their resistance, but often the weather conditions where they were planted in Pennsylvania failed to provide those attacks of late blight needed for severe testing programs. So, when Dr. Mills found the Mexican conditions, he made arrangements to begin testing his plant materials there.

Aiding him in this work is Leopoldo Servin, a graduate student from Mexico. Senor Servin was studying under Dr. Mills. Any resistant seedlings found through the cooperative research will be equally available to Mexico and Pennsylvania growers.

In Mexico, potato fields are maintained at heights reaching 11,000 feet elevations, and these half-wild native varieties are resistant to blight and frost, but yield only 50 to 100 bushels per acre. Since most Mexican growers cannot spray their crops, resistant varieties are virtually essential.

Have Alan Jenkins led a one, two, three sweep of men's figure skating for the first U. S. victory of the Olympics.

Publicly reported dividends amounted to $809 million in January, which was 12 per cent above the same month of 1955, according to the Commerce Department. The month's rise was about the same as that of the full year 1955 over 1954.
