

Angus Auction May 19th at Guernsey Barn

Black Angus take over the Golden Guernsey Sale Pavilion near Lancaster Saturday, May 19, for their last fling of the spring. The occasion will be the 9th Annual Spring Show and Sale sponsored by the Brandywine Angus Breeders Association.

According to Scott L. French, fieldman-secretary of the Pennsylvania Angus Association, it will be the last consignment sale in Pennsylvania this spring. Others were held in Lebanon and Indiana counties.

Fifty-four fancy beef animals, carefully selected by the sale committee from over 100 herds, will take their first bows in the morning show. It is scheduled for 10 a. m. Daylight Saving Time. Then, in the afternoon, the Angus parade through the auction ring starting at 1 p. m. fast time.

The Guernsey pavilion is located six miles east of Lancaster on Route 30.

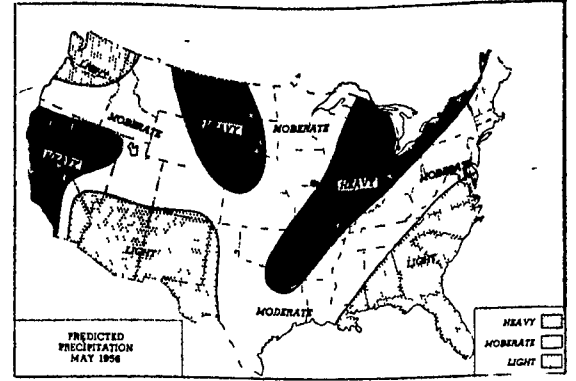

The sale offering includes three bulls, 34 bred heifers and 17 open heifers, French says. They are consigned by 22 breeders from southeastern and central Pennsylvania.

"New breeders and farmers will benefit most from the morning show," French says, because they will see a competent judge rate every animal in the sale." Judge is Dale Fletcher, owner of Dal'bairn Farm, Pine Plains, New York. The Angus fieldman terms him "one of the nation's leading Angus judges."

The committee that selected the sale animals includes John K. Wood, Allentown; Orville

The Weather Bureau's 30-day outlook for May calls for temperatures to average above seasonal normals in eastern and southern portions of the country, with warmest weather in the Gulf States. Below normal temperatures are predicted in the northern half of the nation from the Great Lakes westward to the Pacific, with coldest weather in the Northern Plains.

Subnormal amounts of rainfall are expected in the Southeast, Pacific Northwest, and far Southwest. In the remainder of the country abundant precipitation, mostly in excess of normal, is indicated.
