Benson Points To Two Items

(Continued from page one) lion additional acres under government control, and require us to hire many more compliance checkers and other government workers. We are now controlling production on about 170 million acres. It is almost the same provision as in H. R. 12, regarding which the President said in his veto message:

"The provision for mandatory supports on the feed grain would create more problems for farmers. The market for feed grains would shrink as livestock production would come to depend more on forage and less on grain. The flow of feed grains into government stocks would increase and production controls would necessarily be intensified. Price relationships between feed, livestock and livestock products would be distorted. Producers of feeder cattle, feeder lambs, and feeder pigs would be faced with downward pressure on prices. An imbalance would develop between feed crops and livestock products, with all its adverse consequences."

Secretary Benson commented on the new provision added on the floor of the House, which would add grazing lands to the acreage reserve part of the Soil Bank.

"The first effect of this provision would be to force cattle sales and thereby depress cattle prices," said the Secretary. "The bill provides that livestock numbers be reduced, corresponding to the reduction in acres grazed. The sudden liquidation of, say, 10 per cent of our range cattle would cause a sharp drop in beef prices.

"This provision would also work counter to our wool program, which the Congress enacted to increase wool production. With this provision we would be paying ranchers to increase wool production with one hand and paying them to reduce with the other.

"It would be difficult to administer such a law," said the Secretary. "Fencing would almost certainly be necessary, and much of the range area is not now fenced. Base numbers of livestock are not available. Bases would have to be determined for individual ranches. We would have to do a lot of checking to be sure that cattle numbers were reduced.

"I hope the bill can be cleaned up and made workable in the Senate," the Secretary concluded.
