Stoltzfus' Win PP&L Award for Electrified Farm

"The use of electricity is indispensable in obtaining efficiency in farming today," said Norman E. Reber, managing editor of Pennsylvania Farmer magazine, Thursday, Oct 25. He spoke before 60 people in the El-Mor Motel, Morgantown at ceremonies dedicating the R1 Elverson farm of Louis G Stoltzfus as a Reddy Kilowatt all-electric dairy farm by Pennsylvania Power & Light Company.

Mr Reber stated that the free family farmer existing in the free-America society depends more upon electricity for his progress and growth than on any program devised by the government. The family farmer, declared the farm magazine editor, believes in establishing his own efficiency rather than depending on government aid

Mr. Reber said that two thirds of farm output is produced on the family farm of America today. These family farmers have been able to meet the increasing demands for farm products, not through government aid, but through the use of more mechanization and more electrical power.

The farm editor stated that if the work done by electricity on the Stoltzfus farm could be converted to that done by horses or men, it would be equivalent to that done by 13 horses or 39 men. But, of course, the speaker emphasized neither man nor horse could begin to do the many jobs performed by electricity, such as turning on a ventilating fan or running a hay drying fan.

The speaker called the Stoltzfus family a fine representative of the self-reliant family farmers who have, through electrification and other means, been able to keep going amidst the problems of mid-century Americans.

Mr. Reber declared that Americans should be thankful for the American system of freedom under which such family farmers, a free press and free power companies are able to develop, expand and give service to mankind.

Born near Centerport, Berks County, Mr. Reber was educated at Elizabethtown College and the University of Pennsylvania. He taught in public schools in New Jersey and Pennsylvania before joining Pennsylvania Farmer as field editor in 1946.

Ivan Hess, assistant manager of P. P. & L.'s New Holland District in which the Stoltzfus farm is located, presented the Reddy Kilowatt award certificate to Mr and Mrs Stoltzfus. In making the presentation he called electricity one of the blessings of mankind. He said that P.P.&L. was proud to be able to serve the Stoltzfus family and to honor it with the Reddy Kilowatt farm award given to those farmers profiting from the many advantages of full electrification. Master of Ceremonies was Omar W Brubaker, sales representative, of the utility's New Holland district.

Attending from P.P.&L. were R. I. Jones, the utility director of agricultural development; E. M. Molloy, business development manager of its Lancaster division, E. T. Wilson, farm sales coordinator; and Robert Hawthorne, supervisor of residential sales, Lancaster division.

A ham dinner was prepared and served by the Women's Society of Christian Service of the Morgantown Methodist Church. After the ceremonies Mr & Mrs Stoltzfus conducted their guests on a tour of their farm, where a colorful Reddy Kilowatt farm sign has been erected to mark the outstanding use of electricity made by the family on the farm and in the home.

Teacher: "This makes five times I have punished you this week. Now, Billie, what have you got to say?"
Billie: "I'm glad it's Friday"

Clover Leaf Weevil Control Bulletin Issued by USDA

WASHINGTON — (USDA) — A new six-page Farmers' Bulletin on the clover leaf weevil, now available from the U. S. Department of Agriculture, tells all that farmers need to know about this widespread pest of alfalfa, red clover, and white clover.

According to USDA entomologists these crops are seldom lost entirely from weevil attacks, but they may be seriously damaged. Over most of the country, especially in areas of high humidity, a fungous disease keeps the weevil in check.

The new publication recommends practices that encourage this helpful fungus and at the same time favor the growth of clover and alfalfa. The practices are (1) keeping up fertility to encourage vigorous plant growth, (2) maintaining a good supply of humus in the soil for better retention of moisture, and (3) using alfalfa and clover regularly in mixture with grass in crop rotations.

Usually the fungous disease takes care of the problem. But sometimes in the fall, especially in the South, it may be desirable to spray with methoxychlor at the rate of 1 pound per acre. The bulletin tells just how to use this insecticide effectively and safely.

Single copies of the bulletin, the Clover Leaf Weevil and Its Control (FB No. 1484) may be obtained free from the Office of Information, U. S. Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.
