

Brocade is an important fabric this fall. It is equally smart fashioned in both full-skirt and sheath lines. It has long been a favorite coupled with velvet, now many of the newer numbers feature wool jersey jacket and blouse.

Brocade is being used to make dress separates. There are endless possibilities here. One lovely outfit, perfect for cocktails or an evening at evening at home, is a full white brocade skirt, topped with a bright red, low cut, evening cashmere sweater. This was worn with white velvet shoes.

One of the newer designs of brocade is tweed brocade. It is handsome fashioned into an evening coat with a velvet lining. Some of these evening coats have matching bags and shoes

Clothes to wear in the country have come into their own. They take the place of summer play clothes during the winter. Loden green and brown are two new and favorite colors for this fall and winter. Woolly warm jackets with shaggy fleece lining and heavy knit sweaters seem to set the theme. Comfortable walking shoes and walking skirts are important.

Cotton tweed stockings in bright colors are an attractive way to keep warm on that weekend in the country. Ear-snuggling helmets are another attractive and practical addition to clothes to wear in the country.

Designers are giving special attention to the gals who must work in a uniform these days. There are many new dramatic silhouettes. Even the figure-fashioning empire lines are featured. The classic shirtwaist seems to be the favorite but even that has a new look with much more attention to detail — many have dirndl shirts.

The new man-made fabrics make the care of a white uniform a simple matter. The added thickness and body are a great improvement over the first few years of nylon fabric.

The grass had scarcely sprouted on his wife's grave before Attorney Jenkins was out courting another woman.

"Well," remarked one of his neighbors to another, "I see Jenkins is already looking for a second wife."

"Yes," rejoined the other, "that's just like a lawyer — moving for a second trial."
