

Better Farm-City Relations Urged as Project by Agricultural Council

Better farm-city relations, agricultural industrial coordination, and anti-litter campaigns were suggested as possible projects for the Lancaster Chamber of Commerce at a meeting of the county Agricultural Council Thursday.

The farm-city relation suggestion took several phases. One of the chief of these was the fact that the urban dweller seldom realizes what goes into the food he eats.

His ignorance of what percentage of his food dollar goes to the producer is also causing a rift in thinking between the farmer and the urbanite, it was suggested. Council members felt that few city people realize how little of their food dollar the farmer actually gets.

THE SUBJECT of agricultural participation in the annual Business-Industry-Education Day in Lancaster was also suggested as a project. Most members felt that visits to local farms should be encouraged.

And on the other hand, it was brought up how few farmers have ever visited any of the local industrial plants. It was felt that such a program will be mutually beneficial to the population.

ONE OF THE sore spots of any agricultural region bordering on an industrial city is the fact that industries tend to find the best farm land also the best building sites. It was suggested that if agricultural coordination were a little more firmly established as a practice in the Chamber, sites with less value as farm land could be suggested or found.

The littering of rural roads by city dwellers proved to be a sore spot with the Council members.

"One member said, "Our county is supposed to be the Garden Spot. With the litter and the unmowed roadways, it looks far from that."

THE CHAMBER OF Commerce Task Group studying a possible agricultural program were guests at the meeting.
