Timing of Insecticide Use Aids In Control of Lygus Bugs, Lima Pest

More effective control of lygus bugs, a costly pest to lima-bean growers, is possible by proper timing of insecticide applications, entomologists of the U.S. Department of Agriculture report

Results obtained in five years of USDA research on lygus-bug control were reported to the Pacific Branch of the Entomological Society of America at its 42nd annual meeting in San Diego, Calif., yesterday.

M. W. STONE and Francis B. Foley, scientists of USDA's Agricultural Research Service stationed at Whittier, Calif., said that correct timing of insecticidal applications increased yields of dry beans by 200 to 250 pounds per acre

The average results, they said, showed that a single application of DDT, just after blossoming began (early), or about two weeks later when the pods appeared (intermediate), gave the most significant increases in yield Each of these applications was superior to late application at the time the pods were 1½ to two inches long

Early and late applications combined gave yields no better than an early application alone.
