Louvers Add Beauty

Folding Wall Practical

New designs in sliding and folding door hardware available today have "opened the door" for dozens of new ways to improve the home with room dividers and space-saving partitions.

The drawing shows an example—a room divider that is both attractive and practical. Eight narrow louver doors of ponderosa pine were hinged together like a screen and suspended from a sliding track attached to the ceiling.

In this case, two beds in a bedroom are separated without cutting off circulation of air since the wood louvers let air pass through. When privacy isn't needed, the screen folds back against the wall.

A similar screen also would be ideal between a dining area and living room, to close off a laundry from a basement playroom, or for any number of uses throughout the house.

The louvers also add the distinction of neat texture to rooms, and the clear ponderosa pine is easy to paint or stain.

Sliding and folding louver doors are equally ideal for closets and doors between rooms—anywhere it is desirable to stir thoroughly. Bake in greased floured pan 10x10x2" in moderate oven (350 degrees) about 1 hour. When cool, place lace paper doily on top. Sift confectioners' sugar on doily. Lift off carefully. Cut cake in squares to serve.
