Vol. III. No. 1.

Quarryville (Lancaster County) Pa., Friday, Nov. 14, 1958

$2 Per Year

ALL IN THE FAMILY was the watchword for the 1958 Keystone National Livestock Exposition's Junior Steer Show, as Paul Mast, left with the Hereford steer he placed as reserve champion of the show, behind brother Wesley Mast's Angus, right, which won Grand Championship of the show, behind brother Wesley Mast's Angus, right, which won Grand Championship of the show. Their sister, Rhoda Nancy, far right, displays

"about half" of the ribbons they won in the Wednesday event. Leading Lancaster County 4-H'ers in a near complete sweep of the state show, the members of the Mast family suffered defeat in six classes, showing seven steers — only at the hands of a brother or sister — no one else could turn the trick.

COUNTY EXHIBITORS "STAR" AT KEYSTONE

Morgantown Family Stuns Exposition With Control of Junior Beef Show

When youngsters in one family enter eight baby beeves in a major show, that's news. When they capture the Grand and Reserve championships of the entire junior division of a major livestock exposition, that's really news.

But when they take seven steers into that show and place at the top, in order of standing within their entries, in every class, with every animal they enter, that's impossible.

At least it was until Paul, Wesley and Rhoda Mast, Morgantown, Lancaster County did just that Wednesday at the Pennsylvania National Livestock Exposition.

Wesley, 15, exhibited one of his Angus steers to the Grand Championship over the Hereford of brother Paul, age 19, and a Shorthorn, exhibited by Connie Quesenberry, Stewartstown 4-H member.

After the judge indicated his championship placing, his sister Mae, 13, led in the Angus reserve champion to compete for junior show reserve championship. Paul's Hereford champion won this spot, while the championship class saw three members of the same family competing.

With their seven junior show steers, the Mast trio, assisted by Mae, who has produced five show calves in the past, won these honors.

Grand and Reserve Champion of the Junior Steer Show.

Grand and Reserve champions of the angus division.

Grand Champion of the Hereford division.

Champions of all Angus classes.

Reserve champs of two Angus classes.

One third place in one of those two.

They also provided 3 steers for the Champion Lancaster County

4-H steer group, comprised of solely class champions and runner-ups.

Following the clean sweep of every honor they competed for, the four youngest children of Mr. and Mrs. Jacob Mast, Morgantown, left the arena and officials in confusion as to who won what.

After a continual swapping of halter leads for the various classes as they rushed to exhibit all seven of their entries, the only conclusion was that what the Mast family missed, the rest of Lancaster County's junior entries didn't.

For instance: in the Angus summer yearling class, Wesley, Paul and Rhoda swept the top three honors. From there on it was Magda Frey, Quarryville, 4th; Marilyn L. Cassel, Manheim, 9th; Lorraine Hackman, Elizabethtown, 10th; John J. Good, Manheim, 12th, and E. Bruce Boyd, Ephrata, 15th.

An even more decisive sweep was administered in the Angus junior yearling class as Rhoda copped first place, followed by Paul.

Then, in order, Darvin Boyd, Ephrata, 3rd; John J. Frey, Quarryville, 4th; E. Bruce Boyd, 5th; Darvin Boyd, 6th; Glen Foreman, Manheim, 7th; Gary Kreiner, E-town, 8th; Marilyn Cassel, 12th; Larry G. Falco, Millersville, 13th; Barry Carper, Lancaster, 14th, and Dennis Sangrey, Conestoga, 15th.

In the Hereford division, Robert Gible, E-town, placed 5th in junior yearlings; James D. Hess, Manheim, 8th; and Leona Augsburger, Reinholds, 9th.

Donald M. Herr, Refton, won 4th in the summer yearling competition, followed by Leona Augsburger, 6th; Janice Showalter, Reinholds, 9th; Willis M. Hackman, E-town, 10th, and Cyrus Randler, Lancaster, 11th.

In the Shorthorn division, John H. Hess placed second and Kenneth E. Miller, also of Manheim, 6th in the junior yearling class.

Darvin Boyd placed 3rd in the Shorthorn summer yearlings., John A. Harsh, Kinzers, placed 4th, and Janice Showalter, 8th.

Willis Hackman exhibited the champion senior calf in the Shorthorn division.

Still another major victory for a Lancaster County exhibitor was registered by Fred Frey, Jr., Quarryville. The 25-year-old county farmer achieved a complete sweep of the on-foot and on-rail division of the carcass steer event in the open show. This is Frey's second, victory in this event of the Keystone.

Other placings of the first three days of the Keystone follow.

Mrs. Milton K. Morgan, Lancaster, exhibited her Suffolk sheep to three placings, including one second place in the pen of three lambs event, and yearling ram judging.

John W. Sangrey, Conestoga, won third place in the open class pen of five angus steers class, weight 1051-1200 lbs.

C. Warren Leininger, Denver, won second place in the single Spotted Poland market barrow 221-240 lb. class. He also won sixth and seventh in the 201-220 lb. class.

Albrecht, director of agricultural and home economics extension, The Pennsylvania State University, who is State Chairman of Farm-City Week.

Roger Firestone, Pennsylvania business executive, who has won national prominence as a supporter and counsellor of farm youth educational work, will give the luncheon address.

The luncheon will be one of the highlights of the day-long meeting of the Food Marketing Advisory Council, which will feature detailed reporting of state and federal research and education projects which attempt to answer "What do consumers really want in their market basket, and why do they buy what they buy?"

C. W. Funk, Harrisburg, council chairman, said a better understanding of the reasons why consumers buy what they do will be helpful in continuing efforts to expand the markets for Pennsylvania's farm food products.

Dr. Albrecht said he hopes that persons attending the luncheon will also plan to join in the marketing sessions.

Sharon Hoobler and Floyd Hedland, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C., and Wayne Lee, Bruce Bylund and Fred Robertson, of the Penn State faculty, are among the speakers on the FM-AC program.
