How Good Are Your Heifers?

Two-year old heifers, depending on their exact age, will produce between 20 and 20 per cent as much milk and fat as they will at maturity, says County Agent Robert A Powers

A mature cow producing 600 pounds of fat would produce about 458 pounds of fat as a two-year old. A mature cow making 458 pounds of fat would make only 350 pounds as a two-year old

Size of the record is also influenced by frequency of milking, Powers explains. A record made on three times a day milking is about 20 per cent higher than a record made on twice a day milking. The 600 pound fat record on three times milking drops to 480 on two times milking

The length of the record also can fool you, Powers says. Most cows milk about 10 months, but some lacta-tions run for 365 days. The 365 day records usually run 17 per cent higher than those

Lancaster Farming, Saturday, August 1, 1959—9 that are 305 days in length.
Here again the 600 pound fat record in 365 days is reduced to 498 pounds for 305 days
The average Holstein heifer in Pennsylvania calves at two years and five months of age. She produces 9261 pounds milk and 350 pounds fat (actual). During the same time her mature herdmates make an average of 11,510 pounds milk, and 423 pounds
fat

For most efficient production the county agent says the two-year old should be bred 80 days after calving so as to produce a calf-a-year.

When evaluating the records of your two-year olds in comparison with others Powers suggests these questions

Was she in milk 305 or 365 days?

Did she make the record on 2x or 3x milking?

Was she bred back in 80
days?

Am I thinking in terms of mature records?

S-O-S
(Sack-of-Silage)

S-O-S replaces hay, ensilage, or pasture. It is succulent, palatable and bulky; absorbs water readily—and contains more digestible nutrients than wheat feeds. It can be mixed with home grains, too.

Buy S-O-S. You'll find it to be a profitable investment!
