In discussing the subject of credit in the industry Wentink said, "We hear that our troubles (They may be blessings in disguise) stem from the movement of outside capital into agriculture. No doubt there is also some basis of fact in this statement. To bring about the integration, mergers and industrialization that we have seen in our industry required more money than was available at the local level."

Wentink suggested that any business firm extending credit to another business not containing a majority of the elements of success would soon be on the "path to oblivion" He listed the elements of success as a reasonable market for the product, satisfaction of the market as to quality, price and quantity, managerial ability of the operator, cost of production held to a level which permits a satisfactory margin of profit, and sincerity on the part of all concerned to succeed rather than just sell a bill of goods.

Wentink closed his remarks with the following statement, "In summary, let me say the large problems of the industry are but a combination of very small problems — the problems at your level and mine. On matters of soundness in business, we are our brothers keeper — and in matters of credit and overexpansion it is high time that we collectively display some responsibility. In the words of Benjamin Franklin, 'We must all hang together, or assuredly we shall all hang separately.'"

Most milk quality problems on dairy farms come from poor practices and methods in washing, cleaning and storing dairy utensils.

YOU MAY NEED TO ADD FLAVOR WHEN YOU COOK VENISON

You may want to add some flavoring to venison when you cook it. Most of the flavor of venison is carried in the thin fat covering and usually this is cut off. So you will need to add fat to add moisture to the meat and at the same time it will add flavor. Beef suet, butter, lard and other fats are good to use for basting the meat or rubbing on the meat before roasting
