any raw vegetable until just before serving

You can bake either white or sweet potatoes ahead, scoop them out, mash, refill the shells, wrap in foil, and put in the freezer. With sweet potatoes it's a good idea to use orange juice as the liquid. When you plan to serve, heat potatoes in their wrappings.

Choose your favorite frozen fruit salad and dress it up for the holiday meal. For dessert you may want to freeze a variety of steamed puddings, fruit or chiffon pies, cookies or your favorite fruit cake. Make dinner rolls, fruit breads, or sweet dough rolls ahead ready to heat for serving.

COOK MEAT OF WILD GAME WITH SLOW MOIST HEAT

When the successful hunter returns with game, can you turn it into a successful feast for the table?

If the game you cook does not quite meet your approval perhaps you need to consider long, slow cooking with moist heat. You can't treat wild game like a domestic animal. The wild bird or animal has been more active and he's been tense with fear of the kill so his muscles are less tender.

To cook game, you'll need to plan extra time, perhaps as much as an hour for a pot roast. Always keep the temperature low, about 300 degrees. For moisture, use some of the acid-foods you have on hand—they'll break down and tenderize the muscle tissue. Orange and other citrus juices, sour milk or cream, tomato juice and diluted vinegar help tenderize and add delicate flavor, too.

On a large animal like a deer, you may roast the round, loin and sholder with or without moisture. And you can broil the steaks and chops about the usual time. Many of the less tender cuts work best as ground meat balls, burgers, meat loaf, barbecue and mince meat.
