In the ten years of 4-H club work, Glenn Porter has won two award trips to National 4-H club congress in Chicago, and a trip to the American Institute of Cooperation in Raleigh, North Carolina. In winning these trips, Glenn has held all the offices in his local club and has carried eight different projects.

In addition to being a good follower in club work, Glenn has served as a junior leader in his local club and as a leader in the 4-H tractor program.

In 1957 Glenn went to Chicago as a member of the state championship Poultry Judging team, and in 1959 was a member of the state championship Poultry Demonstration team.

In 1958 Glenn was a member of the Electrical Demonstration team that took first place in state competition. He was a member of the County Vegetable Judging Team for both 1958 and 59.

5 Million Lbs. Poultry Passed

Nearly 5 billion pounds of poultry and poultry products were certified as Whole some and healthful food during 1959—the first year of full operation for the Poultry Products Inspection Act.

This law, designated by Congress as “an important consumer health protection measure,” requires all poultry processing plants engaged in interstate commerce to operate under U. S. Dept. of Agriculture regulation.

Poultry inspection, administered by the Poultry Division of USDA's Agricultural Marketing Service, starts with lot-by-lot check-ups on live poultry as it arrives at the processing plant and carries through processing to the packaging and labeling of the finished product.

Inspectors check to make sure that sanitation requirements of the law are being met and, most important, they examine each carcass as it moves down the processing line. Any that do not meet the standards for wholesomeness are condemned and destroyed.

At the end of the year 740 plants, serving by 1600 USDA inspectors were operating under Federal inspection — both mandatory inspection and USDA 30 year-old voluntary poultry inspection program which is still available to those who wish to pay for it and are not eligible for mandatory inspection.

The poultry industry operated fully with USDA in putting the compulsory inspection program into effect, and numerous processing plants now restricted intra-State commerce have indicated they will be applying for inspection service during the coming year.
