Twelve Foot Stalks Grow Big Tomatoes At Millersville

Tomato stalks 12 feet high with tomatoes 13 to 15 inches in circumference weighing 1½ to 2 pounds are strictly a novelty to most of us, but to Sam Campbell of Millersville these dimensions have become commonplace. Campbell, working with two varieties of staked tomatoes in his back yard, has had stalks over 12 feet tall for the past several years. "The secret of big tomatoes here is TLC (tender loving care)." Campbell says with pride.

Starting with study plants of the Big Boy and Glamor varieties secured May from the hotbeds Amos Funk, Millersville Truck Farmer, Campbell hand feeds his plants the idea of growing the biggest fruits possible on the tallest plants possible. (Turn to page 11)

SAM CAMPBELL OF MILLERSVILLE HAS A RIGHT TO SHOW PRIDE in the tomatoes shown here. Some of the fruit scales 14 to 15 inches in circumference and weigh almost two pounds. Many of the fruit clusters have eight or nine tomatoes and become so heavy that they have to be supported to keep the blossom spur from breaking. Tender loving care grows them this big, Campbell says. —L F PHO
