Hurricane Ups Some Prices

Hurricane Donna, is responsible for price increases on certain produce items this weekend; reports Tom Piper, Penn State Extension Marketing Agent. Heavy rains along the eastern coastal area have delayed harvesting operations and caused extensive loss to certain field crops. Severe damage has been reported in certain sections of the Florida citrus belt but reports are incomplete at this time.

Changes taking place in the supply situation for fruits and vegetables serves notice that autumn has arrived. The local peach harvest has been completed except for a few late varieties. Some peaches are coming out of storage now and prices are higher. Rambo apples remain in good supply and prices are reasonable on the early Intosh. Harvest of Stonehouse, Jonathan and other varieties will begin another week to ten days. The season is ending melons, nectarines & peaches and seedless grapes are available at prices vary with the quality. Lighter supply of bar will command a considerable higher price this week. Temporary price increases may be noted for green cauliflower and sweet peas as heavy rains interfere with scheduled harvest. Locally grown tomatoes, sweet corn, peppers, egg plant, squash, cabbage and turnips head a list of good buy items. Home
