Secretary Henning

resent producers of a commodity in bringing more orderliness to marketing and to engage in educational and promotional work.

Calling for more orderly marketing Henning rapped the system of tobacco marketing in Lancaster county. " . . . Why should Lancaster County farmers wait with bated breath for a small number of buyers to start bidding for their crop? Why shouldn't the producers say on what date the crop will be for sale? Why shouldn't the producers have the right to say that the tobacco will be sold as straight-run with premiums for sorting and sizing?" He asked.

Henning suggested that Lancaster County farmers would be better off with a federal marketing order on a filler tobacco, or with state or national bargaining or marketing cooperatives.

Henning said he will call for legislation making it possible for farmers to form such groups. He also called for more assistance to the soil conservation commission to aid in conservation of natural resources through small watershed flood prevention structures and similar programs

Pennsylvania should start looking for the day when tuberculosis and brucellosis are completely eradicated from the commonwealth, Henning said.

Henning concluded by saying that one of the greatest tasks in the state government is developing priorities so that the most important items receive top priority in planning and action. He called on farmers to keep their legislators informed as to what they consider the top priority items.

In other action, the council elected Richard Hoover of the Farmers Home Administration to fill the unexpired term of Secretary, vacated by Wayne Rentschler.
